everything ends, but there are always new beginnings

It'sOnlyJustBegun

Our accomplishments open a spiral for new beginnings

People are constantly changing. From styles and music to personal beliefs and morals. Perspectives are never lasting, and over time they end, and transition into new beginnings and new possibilities. The spiral represents these changes and progressions in life. Spirals, like humans, have beginnings, but after time come to an end. They are rigid and never perfect, but then again no one is either. The spiral represents people, and how their imperfections and mistakes turn into a whole picture of beauty and wonder. It represents that no matter where something ends, new beginnings will always form from those endings; and new experiences and opportunities, whether good or bad, will always arise and will always be learned from. This is no different in the halls of Battlefield High School. All the students start as freshmen, and throughout their journey to the top, to claim the prestigious title of "Senior," class rivalry continues as well as the determination to discover themselves and establish their place in life. Friendships and relationships will end but from those, new ones will begin. Mistakes will be made and new lessons will be learned, but at the end of their high school career, these experiences will all add up, and will be used to start their next "spiral in life". Although the words on this page are drawing to an end, the fact of the matter is, It's Only The Beginning.

Sophomore Colleen Gawkins and junior Kelia Anderson are debating over who has the better class. Class rivalry and school spirit were both exciting elements during the Homecoming Pep Rally.

Sophomore Jenesis Harper jumps at the opportunity to execute her bucket list dream, "I've always wanted to drive by and knock off all of the sauces at the Chick Fil A drive through window," explains the adventurous sophomore. Looks like dreams really do come true!

Junior Kelli Herr, checks an item off of her bucket list by putting her own twist on "Manic Monday" of spirit week. Dressed as a man, she turns heads throughout the school day. Kelli is not shy as she portrays her alter ego "Kelltray."

Kicking The Bucket List

"Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today." -Thomas Jefferson

As the end of 2012 approached, the students were busy preparing for their next big obstacle, or new beginning. They often forgot what they wanted to accomplish before leaving Bobcat Nation, and entering the real world. "I created my bucket list in seventh grade, and hope to complete every task before I graduate," junior Allyson Keeney said. While many people, like Allyson, planned to accomplish their bucket list, others may not even realize they have one. Although, when asked, everyone came up with a couple things they would like to accomplish before they graduate. Although some bucket list activities may be completed quickly, others may take a lifetime. So seize every opportunity, because tomorrow is never guaranteed!

~Rachel Kerxton & Lauren Suneson

Senior Christian Go wants nothing more for his future than to get stronger. In this picture, he is lifting 265 lbs. Christian said, "My goal would be to lift about 900 pounds." In the fall, he had a little bit further to go, but he was well on his way to kicking that "off the bucket list."

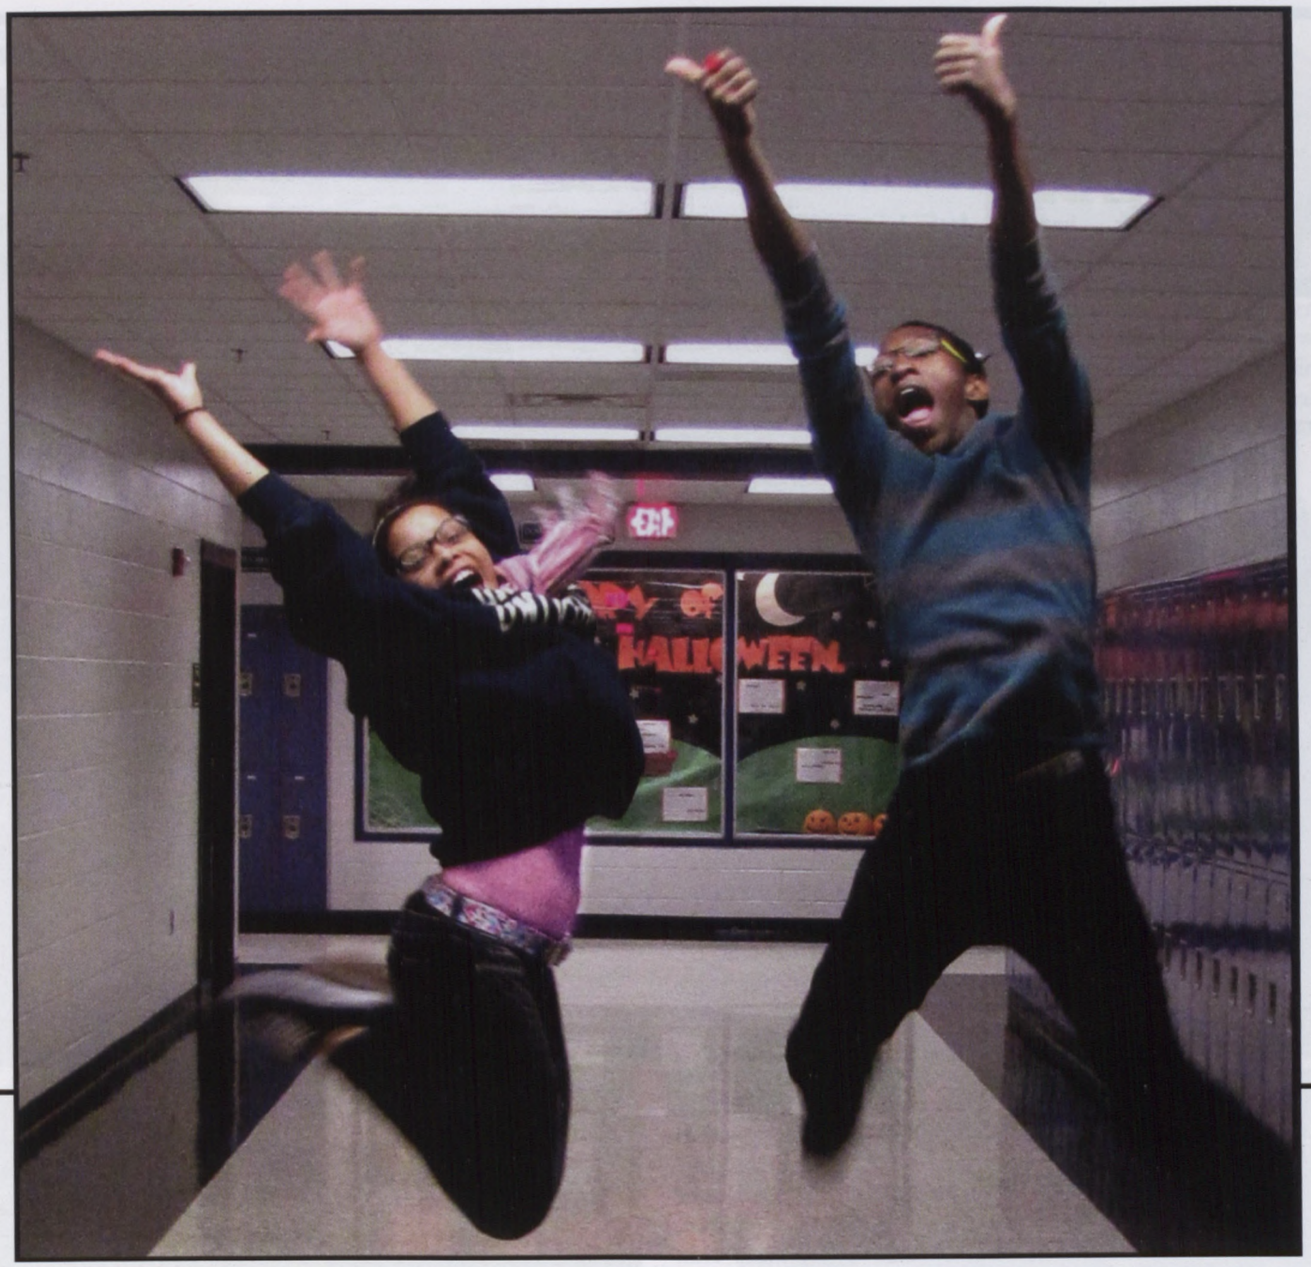

Gunner MacDonald

Freshman Gunner MacDonald had one wish for his four years of high school, to see the varsity football team win the state championship again. Since this was his first year at Battlefield, he missed the glory of last year's win. This year he was on the freshman football team. and although he was not a varsity player, he was a strong believer that the three football teams were all part of one program. To him, a win for varsity would be a win for all of the football players. Battlefield may bring home the state title in future years, when Gunner has the chance to play for it himself.

Freshman Anya Idrizi is more than happy to cross planking off of her bucket list. Planking was very popular among the students of Battlefield, but Anya took it to the next level, planking on top of a soda machine in the hallway. "Planking" is an activity consisting of lying face down in an unusual or incongruous location.

"We're soaring; we're flying!" When asked what an item on his bucket list would be, sophomore Donovan Hunter said he would want "at least one day" of his life to be like a musical. Here, Donovan and his friend Sade Jones, also a sophomore, tried out there High School Musical moves in the hallway after class. Having crossed this off his bucket list, Sade and Donovan were ready to tackle Sade's bucket list.

Senior Kevin Keller had always wanted to save someone from getting hit in the face with a textbook. Senior Samantha French was no match for his desire to cross another item off his bucket list. Grateful for her hero, Emily Kate Duvall, also a senior, was able to go on to her next class, face fully intact.

Junior Hallie Music thanks SMSGT Shuler for his service to America. Hallie always dreamed of being able to thank someone in the military for their service. Since her parents both work in the government, she knows the sacrifices these men and women make. Hallie said, "I've always wanted to give them the appreciation they deserve, because too often they are taken for granted."

Left: Students and faculty were interviewed and their quotes were put into a showcase in the main hallway for 9/11. Right: The American flag hangs in the ROTC room. Students and faculty show their pride by hanging flags throughout the school and classrooms. After the attack, when the dust settled, the flag was still flying.

WhereWereYouWhenthe WorldStoppedTurning?

The New Beginning After a Tragic Event

When death was all around, and buildings were burned, out of the ashes rose a new beginning. One of the most disastrous events in American history occurred on September 11, 2001. "It was awful, but afterward, we pulled through and it brought us together as a country," senior Saydee Bocanegra said about the tragedy. The moment two planes crashed into the World Trade Center was a moment in which everyone was united as one to help victims during the tragedy. Junior Madison Setness had very strong opinions about the incident, "It was an unfortunate situation but it brought us together as Americans... I didn't realize how big of a deal it really was until I moved to Virginia from Oregon." Americans have come a long way in the last ten years. "I believe it damaged our country in many ways, but also it has helped to make airplane travel more secure and safe, and as a country we came together to mourn for the people we lost," Junior Gabby Flores mentioned. Some students, like sophomore Katharine Mitchell, juniors Kristina Wilson, and Chaz Burton have birthdays on September 11th. Junior Sarah Mitchell told the story about what happened on her sister, Katharine's, birthday, "I was in first grade and my sister was in kindergarten at the time, and my mom came to pick us up early from school; we were supposed to go eat lunch, but instead went straight home. My dad came home early and we all watched the news. I noticed from that birthday onward, her birthday would never be celebrated the same."

~Alexis Hawthorne

Sophomore Mia Cangiano and freshman Cory Harris fold the American flag with help from Ayisha Minter. Everyday Americans that lost their lives for our freedom are honored and celebrated.

ROTC members junior Ayisha Minter, sophomores Mia Cangiano, Diana Dai, and freshman Cory Harris raising the American flag. Every morning the flags are raised to honor the country. The flag symbolizes freedom and unity.

Junior Kristina Wilson sitting next to the flag pole in front of the school. Her birthday was on September 11 and she received a teddy bear passed on from her mom. She felt the teddy bear being passed down through her family began new traditions every time the exchange was made.

Junior Chaz Burton is demonstrating what he does to honor 9/11 which is also his birthday. He held two fingers up to represent the World Trade Center towers. "When I was in Kansas this is what we did to show love."

Retired Marine, Michael Vera, was at the Pentagon on September 11, 2001, and witnessed as the third plane hit the building, about 25 yards from where he was getting ready for his day. "I was watching the news when the first plane hit the first tower in NYC. I thought it was an accident... as I witnessed the second plane hit, I knew it was intentional." He was in an office on the fourth floor when the third plane hit the Pentagon. "Honestly, I myself shouldn't be here... part of my office wall fell on me and protected me from the flames." After being unconscious for a while, his first instinct was to help anyone who needed to be helped. He quickly pulled as many bodies as he could from the burning building. Many of Vera's co-workers and friends lost their lives in the building. "9/11 has forever changed who I am... all the training and preparing could never help with what I witnessed."

Americans gather around the ground zero memorial. Two pools with victims' names were built where the towers used to stand. The memorial was made to let people know their loved ones were recognized for their bravery and sacrifices.

Left: Junior Cameron Maples, on the Varsity Lacrosse team, is preparing to go to lacrosse camp over the summer. Other Bobcats also went to camps for their summer vacation. They participated in their favorite activities as much as they could.

Right: Junior Lauren Suneson is going to Ghana in Africa, on a missions trip. She impatiently waited, because she was excited to make a difference. She spent her summer doing something to help out other people in the world.

EndOf180Days:What's YourBeginning?

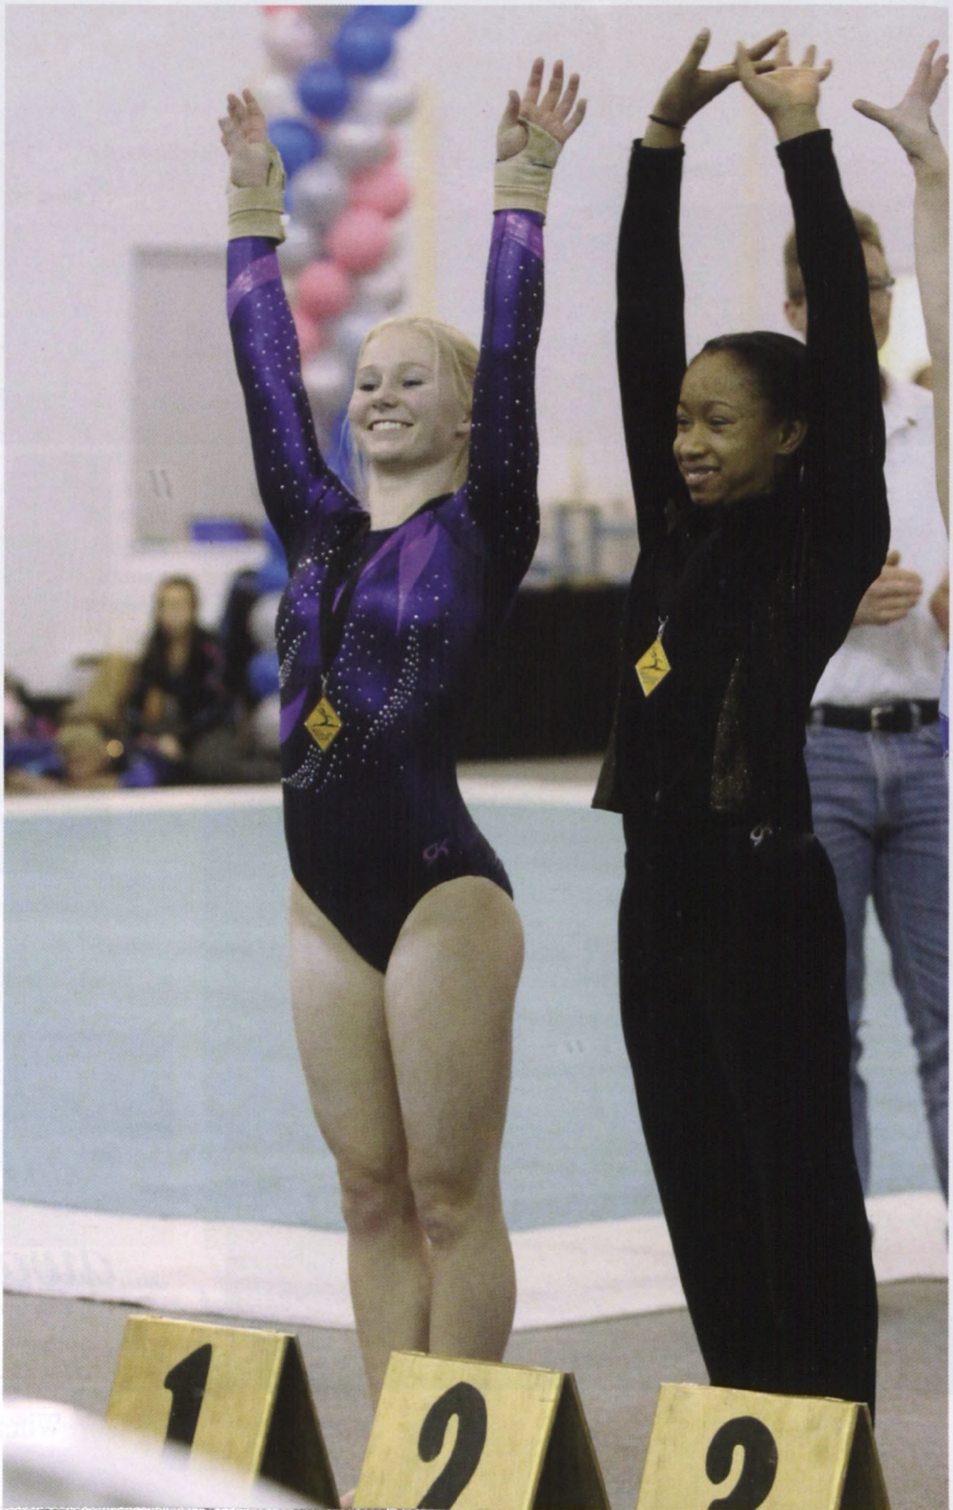

Summer2012

The end of a school year is the beginning of summer. During the summer students planned to chill with friends, go on trips, work jobs, spend time with family, and sometimes, just wanted to sit around and did nothing. Through their summer experiences, students expected to make new friendships, memories, and of course buying new clothes. "I really like my job; because of it, I made new friends and it makes me feel responsible," said junior Kelly McGillivray.

Some people planned on spending their summer playing their favorite sport. Junior Brock Burner commented, "I like the adrenaline rush of going 25 miles per hour on a horse chasing after a ball."

Others would spend their summer helping out as much as they can. "I love going on missions trips because I can experience different cultures and help people from all over the world," said junior Lauren Suneson. Summer, usually the favorite season when it comes to teenagers, would be followed up by a new school year. Seniors went off to college, where they would begin a new chapter in their lives.

Right: Junior Erin Buchanan smiling enormously as she gets awarded first place. Her hard training and determination helped her become an amazing gymnast. "My gymnastics has given me the opportunity to accept a Division 1 scholarship at the University of Illinois where I'll be attending a camp this summer," she said.

Right: Junior Kelly McGillivray is spending her summer working at Bad to the Bone Smokehouse. She planned on working as a cashier, helping many customers. Many Battlefield students, like Kelly, landed jobs during the summer to earn money, and become more responsible in the process.

Below: Junior Brock Burner and an opposing player from Garrison Ford, fully focusing on the polo game. Polo, a game that must be played with much precession, was Brock's preferred summer activity. Other Bobcats also got to play their favorite sport over the summer break.

Left: Senior Alexandra Wright going to the golden state of California over the summer. She was excited about her plans to travel to a different place. Many Battlefield students planned on traveling out of Virginia and visited other states during their summer break.

Diverting Futures

Left, Below: Seniors Michael Fulton and Colin Fowler were laughing about their good times together this school year. They were great friends going through all four years of high school. They shared Math, Spanish, and other classes together at Battlefield, along with their time hanging out outside of school. They built their friendship upon the bond they had for staying hydrated and going to the gym. Their friendship grew as the years went by. Being seniors, they graduated with plans for college. Michael planned on attending James Madison University while Colin attended Shenandoah University. The saddest day of their years in high school was the day they had to leave. But a new beginning awaited them in college. "I'm most excited about playing lacrosse, learning about exercise science, and being a part of the college experience," commented Colin Fowler. "I'm ready to play rec basketball, have some gym time, fish, and go to social gatherings," said Michael Fulton. Although as they graduated and continued on with their lives, they planned on staying in touch.

WheretoBeginWhen BeginningsEnd

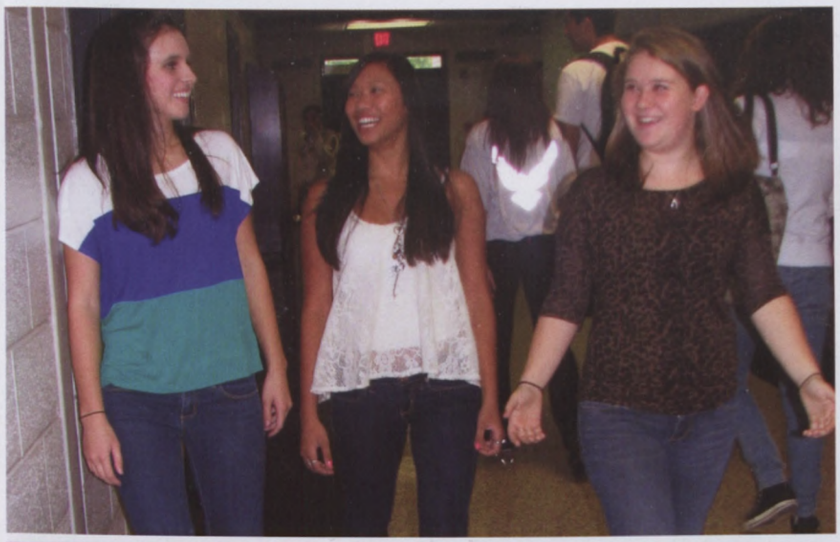

It has been said that all good things come to an end, that is, only if they are allowed to. Eight years ago, Battlefield was born with students from neighboring high schools. Coming together, a bobcat nation was formed. With Patriot High School opening in 2011, students have seen friends leave, although they not forgotten. Sophomore Anastasia Arthur had trouble with this, as a lot of her friends said farewell and headed off to Patriot. Although staying optimistic, Ana stated, "I have made countless new friends, and I also have reconnected with older ones from the past." Through clubs, sports, school wide events, and even classes, students were able to come together to strengthen relationships. They have been given an amazing opportunity to meet new people and try new things. Obstacles have been thrown toward students and friendships have been challenged, but these classmates, strong and proud stand by what they think is important. Those are friends who can be counted on.

"We all take different paths in life, but no matter where we go, we take a little of each other everywhere."
-Tim McGraw

Juniors Connor Schweitzer and Kelsey McKenna cheer on the football players. At the game students participated in the fight against breast cancer in an organized Pink-Out.

Left: Seniors Lexi Jewell-Sharma, Michelle Russell and Ally Falk have been friends for 9 years. Having met in day care, these girls brought their friendship to high school and planned on keeping in touch after graduation.

Left: Caught chatting with some friends in the hallway, junior Dante Richardson stated that he made some new friends being on Varsity Football while maintaining great friends off the field.

Left: Students head down Graduation Drive. They use this road each morning to start their day; when in fact, it will lead them to eventual graduation and adulthood.

Left: Sophomore Leena Dosky catches up with her friends in the lunchroom. She talked about how she made new friends this year with the help of being involved in DECA in addition to maintaining her old friends. These friends helped her get through the day.

Old Relationships Offer New Beginnings

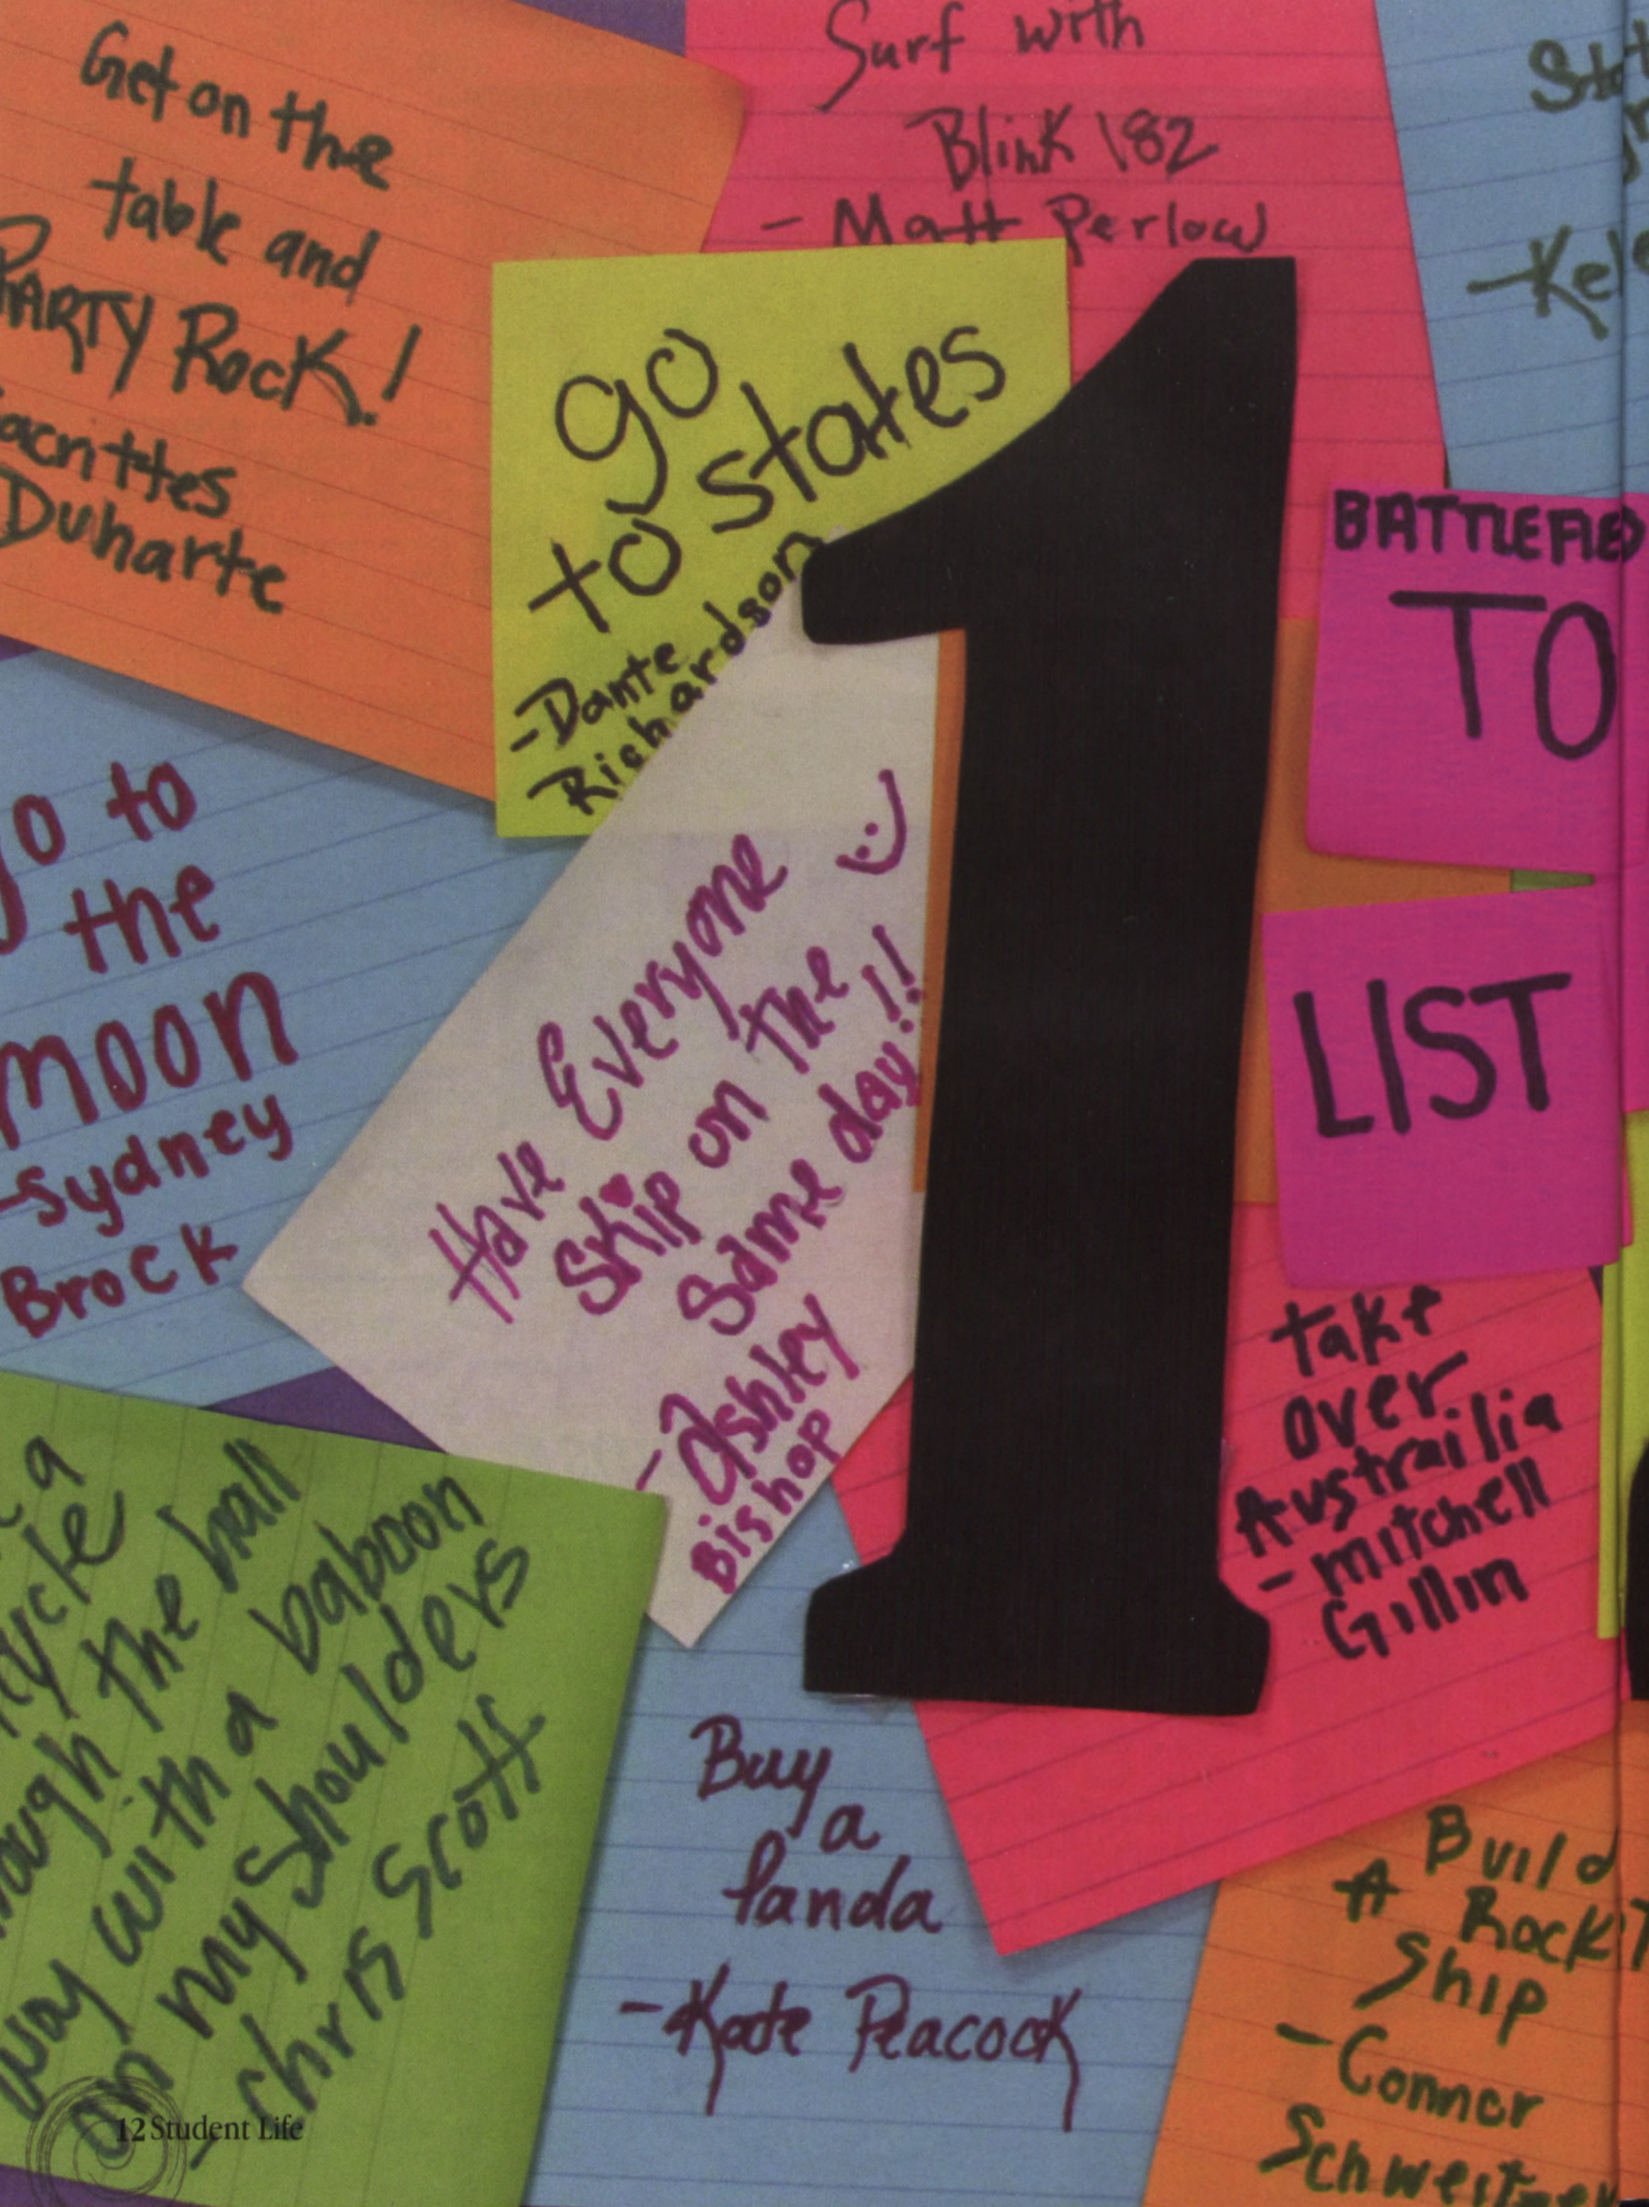

Victoria Kushner

Junior Victoria Kushner had to make some adjustments when boyfriend Jimmy Giudici headed off to Virginia Tech to begin his freshman year. Going on three years, and still in love, this couple kept in touch by skype, letters, phone calls and even visits every so often. "Long distance is hard, but it only makes us stronger" says Tori.

Garrett O'Brien

Senior Garrett O'Brien still maintains a ten month relationship with Alyssa Goodwin, class of 2011 graduate. These two have learned to cherish the little moments. When asked how distance has made them stronger, Garrett explains, "We are forced to work through things a little better, and I think that has been good for our relationship."

It'sAboutANewBeginning

Compassionate students all have shown their ability to help others without asking for anything in return. Each one of them showed a different way of helping out. It is was moving to have such outstanding students helping and supporting people in the world who are less fortunate. They learned the importance of helping people in need. Knowing that they were making a difference in other's lives touches the hearts of so many people. So many horrible events happen to wonderful people every day, having so many students willing to take time out in their busy schedules to help is breathtaking. The Battlefield community could not have asked for anything better from their young adults.

Sophomore Evan Teitelman is an example of a student who spent hours mentoring a boy who did little but play video games, but because of Evan's mentorship, he became a programmer and became interested in computers and robotics. Evan believed that this would "open doors for him in the future." Another student who was involved in Robotics, Junior Terry Jones said that he learned that "starting [Robotics] simply increases your chances of for success." ~Bianca Mannino

Right: Senior Joshua Burgess is another example of a student who spent hours of his personal time giving to the community. Through Eagle Scouts, Joshua helped pick up trash around a cemetery and led numerous Boy Scout meetings. He found that being a Boy Scout leader helped him. "It has allowed me to become even more respectful and disciplined towards others; no matter where they come form or what they believe in."

Above: Senior Rachel Given is hanging up posters to promote her manual about drinking and driving. She has done a lot to help out her community and to help people be aware of the consequences of drinking and driving. She said, "Community service has impacted my life by making me feel better about myself, I think if you help others instead of just you all the time, it helps you as a person as well."

Above: Senior Katie Testut leads a group of elementary students in a game. Katie has been doing community service since she was young. She was an active member of Key Club and Go Club. She said "Community service has made me more understanding of others situations. All of the community service that I do just makes me want to do more to help everyone."

Above: Senior Emily Davis is painting posters for the HALO project. She helped out more than her own community by helping people in Haiti and inspired people to send first aid kits. She said, "Community service has changes my perspective on life, it's very humbling to be able to help people who need it."

Right: Senior Haley Sortzi is helping the children in Haiti. She went there to try and help those affected by the natural disaster that struck the country and tore apart everything they knew. She said "Without [senior] Emily Davis I would of never gone, she talked about it all the time and made me want to see it for myself."

Left: Senior and Eagle Scout Mike Wardlow leads a Boy Scout troop with help from Patriot student Daniel Yu. Helping the community has been an important part of his life. He said, "participating in community service has not only taught me a lot about leadership, but about valuing my community. Volunteering also lets me meet a lot of interesting new people." He also said, "I know that all my community service will definitely help me with getting into a college I want to go to, or help me at a job interview in the future."

Right: Senior Jon Hitt is the Tech Assistant for Battlefield High School. He works with Mr. Binstead and is hired by the school, a rare occurrence for a student. Working as an intern has "allowed me to see a different side of life," says Hitt. "I have grown and excelled throughout the years to become the tech assistant." Hitt believes that his internship will also help him land a career as an IT consultant when he graduates from college. Jon is also involved in Robotics, through the IT program. Jon said that Robotics "allows me to find new friends outside of school." The IT program at Battlefield is known for the service it has giving to the community through mentoring elementary school teams and speaking to the importance of technology in the future job market and world economy.

WhatToBe RememberedFor

After the End of Senior year, How Will They be Remembered?

As the Senior Class of 2012 tries to make their final year the best year yet, many of them strive to leave their everlasting prints on the Bobcat Nation. This unique, genuine, and quirky group of seniors have created cherished memories that will last a life time. Senior Amanda Wheeler stated that her favorite memories in high school were "Creating a ton of friends, chillin', and loving high school'". Through all the trials and tribulations these brave students have overcome, they have stood by each other for the past four years; lending support and guidance for one another in the path of success. Soon they will leave and enter a whole new exciting world; creating new lives for themselves. Senior Monique Lucas stated "I'm excited and ready to leave for college." As exciting and nerve-wracking as it is to leave for bigger and greater things, the Senior Class of 2012 will never forget each other, or be forgotten.

~ Kierra Johnson

When asked if she had any special talents , Senior Chanel Gagne responded with,

"I can lick my elbow."

Above: Senior Chanel Gagne helps redesign 2nd street during spirit week. Her favorite moments in high school were participating in spirit week and she hoped to be remembered for going all out in the most exciting week of the school year.

Below: Senior Michael Tolliver wears number 4 proudly on the varsity football team. He was a member of Advanced Robotics and hoped to become a Network Engineer. He was anxious to create a new life for himself after high school. If given the chance to, he would have liked to be more active in school clubs. Michael wants to be remembered as being intelligent, helping other people out and being cool with people.

Above: Senior Jacob Fortney is psyched for college life and hopes to attend JMU. He is athletic and often traveled to Beckenridge, Colorado to snowboard. He wanted to be remembered for being one of a kind.

Left: Senior Julia Scott shows off her artistic capabilities when creating a poster promoting the Barn Organization for DECA. She had been supporting the Barn for 2 years. She hoped to be remembered for being nice.

Left: Senior Megan Kriss was the sections leader for trumpets. In her free time she enjoys drawing. She hoped to be remembered for being apart of the BHS marching band.

Left: Senior Allison Beich and her twin sister Anna Leigh Beich have the special talent of speaking jibberish to one another. Allison hoped to attend VT or a private college. She loved swimming and attending football games. Allison hoped to be remembered for being genuine and inspiring kids to be themselves.

Above: Senior Loren Treague was Branch Manager for the Bobcat Branch. She hoped to be remembered for being successful but still being able to have fun and make people smile.

Left: Senior Samantha Trone shows off her quirky side with Principal Mrs. Ethridge-Conti and Assistant Principal Mrs. Porter-Lucas. Samantha will be remembered for being outgoing and quirky.

Senior Charles Hritz was a new student and he has a fond passion for guitars. He is incredibly talented and he hoped to one day to become a chef or a luthier (a luthier is someone who makes stringed instruments). He wanted to be remembered for being the funny and outgoing new kid who everyone knew.

Left: Cheerleaders were all smiles as their Bobcats demolished Freedom South Riding at the homecoming football game. Juniors Mikayla Kyle, Courtney Dotterer, and Erica Reese cheered on the boys during the third quarter. They could not help but anticipate the win that was about to happen. Right: Seniors Sofia Gasperino and Allen Baltimore are thrilled to be crowned king and queen of homecoming court. Everyone waited in suspense at half time of the homecoming game to see who would be the royalty of the upcoming dance. Although all the nominees were dressed to the nines, and loved by their fellow classmates, only one couple could be deemed the fairest of them all.

Remembering The Moments

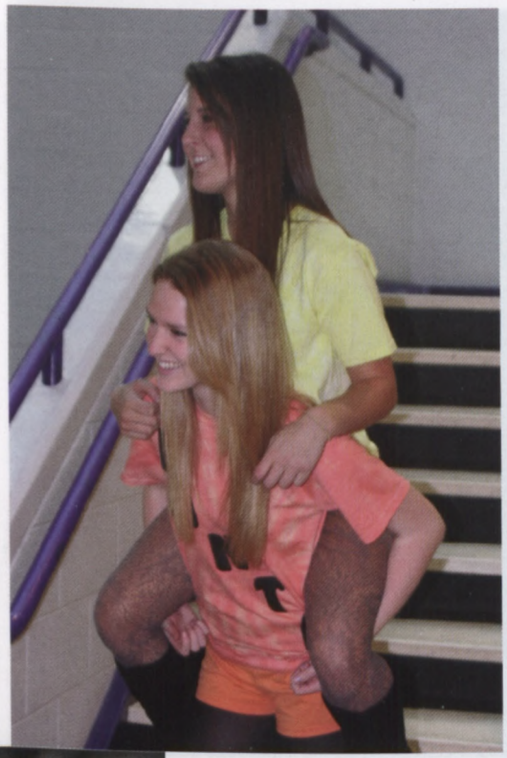

Homecoming Week

Anticipation built through the halls as Battlefield came closer and closer to its favorite week of the year. Junior Miranda Stevens, who was a new student this year, shared, "Battlefield takes Spirit Week seriously; everyone gets into it and it makes a big school feel close knit." Spirit Week. Battlefield was one of the most spirited schools, as shown by the number of students who came to school dressed in the most outrageous combinations of clothing. "It's fun to watch the enthusiasm build throughout the week leading up to the big game on Friday," said senior Emily Andrews. "Football is huge at Battlefield." The Bobcats took home the win against Freedom-South Riding. with a score of 35-0. The week continued into Saturday evening, when Battlefield held their Hollywood Fantasy Homecoming Dance. Spirit Week was a week which made the school year a little more bearable, a week which joined Battlefield students together to show their spirit, and most of all, it was a week to remember.

Above: During Spirit Week, all four classes got their creative juices flowing to decorate a hallway in the school according to their class movie genre. The Seniors were fantasy, juniors were comics/superheroes, the sophomores were action and adventure, and the freshman were science fiction. Here, senior Catherine Kwon was decorating a poster as part of Hogwarts in the senior hallway.

Above: Seniors Ryan Newton and Rachel Fraga showed their dominance as upper classmen by coming to school in togas. Part of class color day, white togas were a long-standing tradition at Battlefield. Seniors looked forward to the day when they could show their superiority over the other classes.

Below: Juniors Hallie Music and Jonathan Esteban duel it out in the hallway during Class Theme Day. Seniors were fairytale and fantasy, juniors super heroes and villains, sophomores pirates and freshmen space and science fiction characters. Theme Day was a favorite at Battlefield because students were able to be creative and competitive with themes, which change every year.

Right: Freshmen Becca Harvey and Alexandra Plaugher were getting into Wacky Day during Spirit Week. "Manic Monday is my favorite because you can be the most creative," said sophomore Tiffany Wayman. This spirit day let everyone pull together their craziest outfits with things like hot pink pumps, blue fake eye lashes, suspenders and more.

WeHaveSpirit
Pep Rally

The October Pep Rally was a great success! Pep rallies were events that students were able to attend as a student body. Everyone came together to have fun and support the Bobcats! These rallies gave the school even more spirit than it already had. At the October Pep Rally, freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors joined to have a good time. They watched great performances by the dance team, cheer team, and drama club; the students also watched the staff struggle to get to the finish line of the tricycle race. Each class cheered as they supported their representative in the race. The freshmen class was thrilled when their representative Miss Starkey took the win! Even though the freshmen class won the tricycle race, they did not beat the sophomore class in having the most spirit. As part of the Pep Rally, the dance team raised money for flood victims, and in return they gave out spirit links. The class of 2014 gave the most money, therefore having the most spirit links. Sophomore Rajin Palani said, "We participated really well."

Pep rallies were a good way for all the grades to come together and support the terrific school they attended. The Fall Pep Rally was especially fun for seniors. For them, it was their last pep rally in high school. Senior Johnny Luangkhot said with nostalgia, "It's sad to know that it was my last pep rally."

Not only was it fun for the students, but for the teachers as well. As part of the Pep Rally tradition, the Varsity Football players asked their favorite teachers to wear their jerseys. This brought the teachers and students together in school spirit. No matter where students and teachers go in life, they will always be a Bobcat. ~Rylie Mckee

KeepingThe Tradition Alive

Da Den

The football season was one of the biggest parts of the school year, but what would it have been without Da Den? Many seniors left their mark with outrageous costumes and paint, and many were sad to see it was their last year going to the football games. Many thought the Class of 2013, and beyond, would not be able to top them in any way. Senior Bianca Mannino said, "There is no way they will ever top our outgoing personalities, individualities, and our pre-game routines to hype us up." Whether they were freezing their butts off, rowdily cheering on the Bobcats, or warm in their costumes, they are surely one of a kind. Senior Vaughn Land thought the "horns" were his favorite part of Da Den's routine. Now it is the Junior Class' time to take over the responsibilities of Da Den. Whether it is doing the push-ups, painting, or coming up with new traditions, they must keep it crazy and wild. The Class of 2012 have left their paw prints and Bobcats Spirit on Da Den, from costumes to chants. It will be interesting to see how classes beyond will keep the tradition alive.

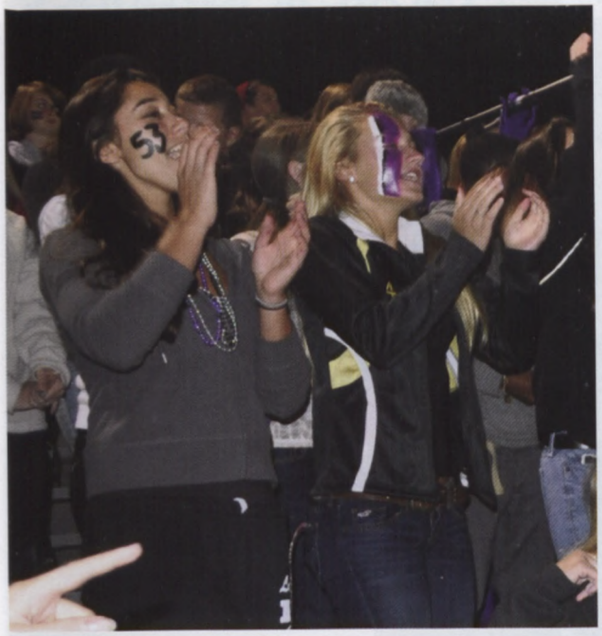

~Thomyia Jones

Below: Senior Julie Levitt is supporting breast cancer awareness, and is showing her Bobcat pride at the Pink Out Football Game. When BHS Football team scored a touchdown, hands went up in a paw print shape and the crowd cheered happily. School spirit was large and in charge in Da Den, with the bright pink and loud screams.

Above: In September, Da Den was featured in The Gainesvile Times celebrating Battlefield's school spirit and successful football season. Throughout the season, whether it was cold or warm, Da Den came out to support the Bobcats. Below: Lady Bobcat is anxiously watching the football game as it unfolds. The Lady Bobcat not only cheers the team to victory, but also helps the crowd get pumped as well. She is notorious for keeping up school spirit and free high-fives.

Above: Da Den is dropping and "giving them 20" in honor of the football team scoring another touchdown against Stonewall. Seniors Tyler Glenn and Vaughn Land with other members of "Da Den" do 20 push-ups. Even in the freezing weather they show their support, and get a little exercise in.
Below: Getting ready to do a chant, Senior Ford Whitticar rounds up his Den family. Painted to spell out "BOBCATS" they were ready to form their line and scream their heads off. Whether it was rain or shine, they always showed their support as one big family.

Left: Senior Stephanie Deleo and Freshman Rosie Clink deliver carnations to Mrs. Graham's first block class. Receiving carnations helped maintain the holiday spirit as the winter break arrived. Kids were able to purchase both carnations and ducks for delivery.

Right: DECA formed together to work for a cancer awareness cause during the holiday season. Many people helped raise cancer awareness. The members of DECA were doing their part during the time of giving.

Winter Wonderland

Most people would agree that the holidays are the best time of the year. Bobcats really loved to spread the cheer throughout their school. The Christmas Sweater Club was a prime example of how to spread the cheer when it came to the holidays. "Spreading cheer is what I'm most passionate about," said senior Will Sheehan. Students at Battlefield were really enthusiastic during the holiday season thanks to all of the events that were going on in the school. DECA the Halls showed support for fighting cancer; they made posters and put them up all around the school in an effort to raise awareness. "Spreading cheer and showing awareness for such a great cause is such an amazing thing to contribute to," said junior John Agnos. DECA also collected and donated Christmas presents for the children at BARN (a battered women's shelter). Each member willing to participate was given a slip of paper with the age, gender, and wish list of a child living in this home. A couple of students and advisers drove to BARN right before winter break to deliver the gifts. Another holiday contribution was a JROTC trip; they visited the sick and the elderly for the holidays. JROTC provided the senior citizens with presents and companionship, and brought them joy. "It was great to see the senior citizens smile and to learn about their lives," said freshman Keni Aikau. The Key Club also continued their tradition as they organized Merry Messengers; they raised money for Smile Train by selling carnations and ducks to students, which were delivered to their friends and teachers throughout the school. The holiday cheer soared through the halls of BHS during this time of year.

~ Rachel Augustine and Yelena Medovar

Junior Emily Harris, District President of DECA, helped hang posters in the hallways. DECA created an event called "DECA The Halls" where members posted holiday related posters with cancer statistics. This was to help educate the students and spread awareness about the harmful effects of cancer.

"I'd like to thank my Bobcats in JROTC for being so great this year!" said senior Kathryn Schmidt.

Above: Sophomore Jessica Son organizes carnations to be distributed to during firsts block. Purchasing carnations allowed students to show their friends and teachers that they were thinking of them during the holiday season, and helped support charities as well. The Merry Messengers continued to bring holiday cheer to the halls of Battlefield.

Left: Wearing their best outfits, the Christmas Sweater Club are enjoying each other's company. They got their festive sweaters from the Salvation Army, K-Mart, and random grandmas. "I'm passionate about Christmas and spreading the Christmas spirit," said senior Nick Crosson when asked about the purpose of the sweaters.

Above: Senior Angela Cho, junior Ana Tobar, sophomore Kailtyn Yetman, senior Mimi Ampomah, and senior Megan Yetman collect gifts for the children who are less fortunate. Merry Messengers did a lot to help, including raising money for Care Kids. "I enjoyed giving back to my community, in a way that not only helped me, but children less fortunate than me," said junior Ana Tobar.

Left: During the ROTC trip to a senior residence, senior Sean Ross plays the piano as sophomores Travis Sievert and Alex Rivera and sing carols. The ROTC cadets brought the spirit with them through their music. Residents were reminded of home and past holidays, while the sang along.

Left: Hundreds of carnations and holiday ducks waiting to be delivered. The Key Club sold hundreds of carnations to kids across the school. Students felt the warmth of the holidays when they received their surprises from friends, teammates and secret admirers.

Below: Below: JROTC is bringing presents to the senior citizens of the Haymarket/Gainesville community. These students are prepared for Christmas in the right way. Battlefield Bobcats enjoyed spreading holiday cheer throughout the community.

Left: Senior Stefan Brings brings a classroom the carnations their friends and significant others bought for them. Key Club worked toward raising money for charity with this event. He commented, "Through our dedication and hard work, Key Club helped raise over $500 toward Smile Train, an organization that helps little kids with cleft palettes."

Fun and Exciting Times New Experiences, Friends, and Growth

High school is a new beginning, where learning and experiencing the world was a part of growing up. The first year could be intimidating, getting accustomed to new surroundings and people, but in the end it was rewarding. Moving on to sophomore year, students began to feel more comfortable and develop a sense of belonging. They started to become more involved in different clubs and activities and become a larger part of the school. The next stage of high school was difficult. Work began to pile on and, gas money began to add up. Though stressful at times, junior year was full of rewards and new found freedoms. The last year here could seem like the toughest. As seniors prepared to enter the real world, a sense of nostalgia set in. Being a senior was bittersweet, wanting to hang onto the old and leap into the new.

~Rachel DeVore and Saydee Bocanegra

Everyday life at school is filled with daydreams, endless giggling, tickling and memories with peers that will never be forgotten.

Lucky 13 2013

As many juniors looked forward to their senior year, it was also a good opportunity to reflect on the school year as a whole. Junior Kenneth Earl found that his junior year was more challenging than his sophomore year because "there were more difficult classes, and I had to work harder." It was also a year for trying new things - he joined the Mock Trial Team. Among other new transitions, many juniors saw friends leave to attend Patriot. Kenneth says he keeps up with his Patriot friends Kyle and Jordan through "Facebook and just by keeping in touch." Preparing to take on his senior year, Kenneth looks forward to graduating with an Advanced Diploma.

Sophomore Swag

The transition from freshman to sophomore year was a whole new experience for most sophomores and left some feeling a lot "cooler" and more comfortable at Battlefield. As sophomores, students had more flexibility in their schedules, were more familiar with the high school atmosphere, and of course, anticipated the opportunity to take their permit test and start driving! Students Eema Iftikhar and Khushboo Thiagaraj said they really enjoyed sophomore year and loved all the new privileges that went along with it.

~Miranda Stevens

Eema Iftikhar working on an assignment in Fashion Marketing, a class designed to teach the true definition of fashion, along with many marketing skills. As a sophomore, she had flexibility in her schedule and was able to take more classes that interest her. "This year I know a lot more about the school and feel more comfortable taking classes with upperclassmen," she said.

Khushboo Thiagaraj talks to her friends Erik Orlang and Deja Dozier while waiting to watch a video on the dangers of drug use in her Health and PE class. She said, "Sophomore year has been a lot better because I was new as a Freshman and didn't know many people. I'm looking forward to making even more friends throughout high school and passing my permit test!"

New Year, New Friends

Sophomore year is a big adjustment for students Thierry Pradier Ruhe and Tyler Nichols. Both students have been driven to make new friends. Although Thierry has sacrificed some of his friends to Patriot High School, he is happy to say he has made many more. Tyler, on the other hand, just moved to the area and is a new student at Battlefield this year. He has also made an abundance of friends as well. Tyler and Thierry are both thankful for their friends, their education, and their favorite teacher, Mr. Alouise.

Tyler Nicols talks to McKinley Groves in Mr. Aloise's geometry class. The two sophomores became friends this year. It was a big change for Tyler who has moved many times and most recently from Springfield.

Thierry Pradier Ruhe flaunts a big smile while he draws his portrait. He enjoyed this year because "it is a little more challenging." With support from his teachers and friends, Thierry had an extraordinary year.

Athletics

The Pain of the Past Represents the Pride of the Future

"Coming together is a beginning. Keeping together is progress. Working together is success." ~Henry Ford. Time may change, but the game never will. Battlefield athletics were as strong as ever. Losing students and athletes to Patriot High School allowed teams a fresh start. This separation allowed for brand new teams to be formed and new opportunities to come forth. With that separation and the determination to win, the teams were willingly forced to come together and exceed the expectations of everyone inside and outside of the community. The students and their families came out to support the athletes at games, meets, and competitions, and demonstrated what Bobcat Pride was truly all about. These athletes fed off the energy of each other, and thrived off the enthusiasm that radiated from the crowds. Sports teams put in long strenuous hours of hard work, and they continued the long legacy of winning which the previous years had created. It was the athletes who created the success of the teams. They were led by the coaches, but ultimately it was the athletes who used their training to persevere over the rest, and to claim the title of supremacy. As a senior and member of the Girls Varsity Field Hockey team, Ali Sunderland said, "By working together, Bobcat athletics have truly soared to new heights." The athletes of 2011-2012 reached new peaks, which will be hard to surpass in the years to come.

Varsity Cheer

They were strangers, became friends and sisters, and united as a family, and a team. They were Battlefield Varsity Cheerleaders! Senior Corey Eybers said, "I love how much of a family the team became throughout the season." On Varsity there were not only seniors and juniors but sophomores and freshmen as well." Freshman Courtney Bowman commented, "My first experience of Varsity Cheer was amazing. The coaches pushed us so hard because they knew what we were capable of doing. My team is a family and we love each other." No matter if they won or lost, they were always there for each other. Junior Lauren Picard stated, "The best memory from Regionals would have to have been just being there as a team. We all love and trust each other a huge amount, and it's great to have your teammates there whenever you need them." Through all their work, the cheer team finished the season as District Champions! Battlefield Varsity Cheerleaders will take the lessons they learned from being on the team and use them later in life; they know where it is at!

Freshman Cheer

Being a cheerleader on the Freshman squad took more than just energy, school spirit and a loud voice. It required countless hours of time and wholehearted devotion to the sport. For many freshmen, the transition into high school with new responsibilities can be extremely overwhelming. The girls on the Freshman Cheer team took on an even bigger challenge by making the commitment to be a part of the squad. Freshman Lexi Barberoglou said "Balancing cheer with school is probably the hardest part of being part of the team." While it may have been a challenge to be a part of the team, the girls formed an incredibly close bond throughout the season.

JV Cheer

Right: Battlefield cheerleaders express their creativity and individuality in decorating their cheer boxes. Each member of the squad put her name on their box and decorated it their individual spirit. Some added streamers, ribbons, and even footballs to their boxes that they use for formation and cheering on the sidelines at the games.

The 2011-2012 Junior Varsity Cheer squad took Battlefield cheer to the next level. The team was composed of freshmen, sophomores, and juniors; and the variety of age and talent allowed the team to excel in ways they had not before. The year provided many new opportunities for learning and forming new friendships. Freshman Amanda Clary, on the JV team, said, "My favorite part about cheer has been meeting new people to help adjust with high school." Despite the difference in ages, the team became incredibly close throughout the season. "The best part about cheer is being with our sisters," sophomore Karen Taylor and freshman Kristin Gobbi said. The JV cheer team served an important role in the BHS community and will continue to grow in the years to come.

Cross Country

Below: Junior Nicole Carter turns a corner during a 5K. She has been running Cross Country for three years. She was a dedicated runner not only in Cross Country but Nicole also ran Indoor and Outdoor Track.

"We're all one family," says Rachel Thompson, a senior on the Cross Country team. When the team was asked what their favorite part of Cross Country was, the universal answer was the family aspect, the bonding experiences that united the team as their season went on. Long bus rides, and team dinners we are just two of their many bonding activities that made Cross Country so much fun. These runners participated in a unique sport; they ran long distances on various terrains such as trails, street, dirt, and occasionally even through streams and water. They woke up at 5 a.m. every Saturday to compete in a 5k race. Cross Country runners needed dedication, and so much more. ~Ali Sunderland

Above: Juniors Kristen Loehle, Hannah Schwennesen, Nicole Cercy, Sarai Arbus, and Senior Rachel Thompson laugh together while taking a break after warm-ups. This was a practice the afternoon before the day of a race. These practices were often more laid back. This way the runners didn't over exert themselves, became tired for the race.

Dance Team

The Battlefield High School Varsity Dance Team made many accomplishments throughout the school year. Led by coaches Julie and Kelly Colgan, and team sponsor Melissa Golden, the dance team danced their way to victory at the Garfield High School Dance Champs. The dance team placed second in jazz, second in kick, and second place in the variety category. Soloists Briana Idrizi, Gianna Mollica, Margaret Bean, and Jessica Gandy did a phenomenal job at the competition. Briana Idrizi placed first, Gianna Mollica placed third, and Margaret Bean placed sixth. The girls on the dance team really worked together as a family. Junior co-captain Margaret Bean stated, " working beside Gianna is the best, I look up to her and she inspires me everyday." Another dancer, freshman Michaela Sedlak said, "being on dance team has really helped me to gain friendships that will last a lifetime." Sophomore Jaclyn Hambric stated, "I look forward to dance team every year, it's a major bonding experience for everyone on the team." The team has worked extremely hard to accomplish all of their goals. Seniors Cameron McPhail and Grace White said, "being a part of the dance team has helped us reach our goals of becoming better dancers and better people." Overall the dance team was a real crowd pleaser, and the audience looked forward to their performances at every game.

~Gianna Mollica and Cameron McPhail

Above: Freshman Linda Kil grips her iron in preparation to swing from the fairway. Choosing a club is a vital aspect of golf. Just as different clubs are made with different materials and into different shapes, they are made for different purposes on the golf course.

Right: At practice, sophomore Brian Ganow gingerly places his ball on the green. The precision of a putt means the difference between success and failure. Statistics have shown that about 40% of a golfer's shots are putts.

Right: On the green, senior Doc Schulte positions himself to make a long putt. There is very little room for error when it comes to putting, but striving for exactness paid off. "Seeing the ball roll into the center of the cup" was naturally one of his favorite parts of the game.

Far right: Keeping still and focused, senior Tyler Glenn prepares to putt. Part of what aids golfers in making successful shots is their ability to focus. They trained themselves to disregard their surroundings and anything else that may pose as a distraction; a key to remaining focused is the discipline of mentally removing any potential obstacles.

InFullSwing
Golf

What ultimately brings success to the team and satisfaction to the coaches? Coach Thomas Metts said, "Seeing the commitment. To be this good at golf, you have to play it for several years." The players snagged the winning title in the Cedar Run District Championship in September. The following month, they achieved the top spot as Northwest Regional Tournament Champions for the second time in the school's history. They were proud to place 4th in the state tournament. In the Girl's State Tournament, sophomore Khushboo Thiagaraj finished in seventh place; her sister, senior Karishma Thiagaraj, finished in second place. Additionally, Coach Metts was named Cedar Run District Coach of the Year.

Despite the importance of competition, the game itself is rewarding in other ways. Freshman Erich Gall remarked, "If you're out here, you pretty much forget about everything else. It clears your mind." Naturally, many players had dedicated several years to the game. Senior Paul Leonard III had been involved in golf for about ten years. Senior Doc Schulte also had a long history in golf and did not foresee his involvement in golf ending at graduation. He adored the game too much for that, saying, "It just feels great when you stick it two feet from the hole from 150 yards out." He planned to play in college. For him, and probably for many others on the team, the end of this season is only the beginning.

~Emily Andrews

Below: Despite the rain, senior Paul Leonard III aims to reach the green. Course conditions in the rain affect the way the ball is played. Knowing how to approach this situation comes with experience, and Leonard has played golf for about ten years.

Left: Junior Nicklaus Kwon makes a tap-in putt. Tap-in putts are easy but should not be made carelessly in competition. To save time, recreational golfers will often concede the opponent's tap-in.

Right: Teeing off, sophomore Thomas Fricke executes a smooth swing. A proper swing requires proper technique; this includes good grip, balance, pivot, and follow-through. While golf swings vary slightly among individual golfers and their personalities, the fundamentals of a solid swing remain constant.

Through the years that she played field hockey, she helped her team by becoming a committed team mate and defending goals. Along with her team mates she keept up their intensity to win their games.

Varsity Field Hockey

Varsity field hockey had an awesome season with a record of four wins and five losses and one tie. This year the field hockey team was led by co-captains seniors Ashley Bishop #11 and Hailey Boone #22. "These ladies learned throughout their season that the best way to work as a team was to be together as a family" stated Coach Power, who helped the girls improve their endurance, as well as strengthened their team bond. The team will miss all the silly stuff left behind and bond of sisterhood between one another that has been built through the season. Coach Power hopes next year to beat Osborn, and to have another fantastic season with the girls.

These lady Bobcats of JV Field Hockey had a fantastic season this year, with a record of four wins and four losses. Players, from freshman to juniors, stuck together as a team throughout the season. Coach Moser taught them how to keep their heads in the game and leave everything else on the field. This year Coach Moser chose different captains for each game to let the girls have a chance of leadership. Both Coach Moser and Coach Power brought both JV and Varsity teams together as a family by practicing everyday as one big team. This taught both teams how to communicate and help one another keep the bond of sisterhood strong. The girls were not only taught the fundamentals of being a successful field hockey player, but also learned how to be an awesome teammate as well.

Above: During the second rematch against Hylton, Juniors Jack Taylor and Brandon Dukeman dive for the loose ball. After causing Hylton's quarter back to lose control of the ball, it was important for the Bobcats to recover the fumble. This major play changed the momentum and helped the boys seal the win in the Regional Championship game.

Friday night lights were the highlight of the week September through December. Crowds gathered to watch the boys' hard work pay off. The players took the season one game at a time, making sure they did not get ahead of themselves. The season started off rocky, with a loss for the second game of the season. It improved with 4 straight wins. After the loss to Osbourn, a new approach was taken to practices and games by coaches and players. Three more "W's" ended the regular season.

The post season began like the previous year, with losses against Hylton and Osbourn. Sadly, the season did not conclude like the previous year. The team reached Coach Cox's goal of practicing on Thanksgiving, and winning the regional game against Hylton. For senior Ali Afshar, this game was vital to him. He said, "Revenge is sweet!" This season was the third year in a row that they were regional champs and were in the state semi-finals. However, in the state semi-finals, the varsity boys were defeated 14-42 at home against Oscar Smith. When asked what the loss meant for next year, Coach Cox stated, "With the loss to Oscar Smith, it opened the eyes of the players and coaches, as to what level we need to be at to compete with an elite program like Oscar Smith. Current and past players have made giant steps towards becoming that type of program and they deserve a lot of credit." -Abby Regis

Starting in the middle of August, the Freshman Football team began practice. They were moving up from Middle School football to a team with different plays, players and ethics. Freshman Matthew Scott, number 26 said " The competition and size difference is the biggest change." Transitioning from youth league football to a high school caliber team can be difficult. When asked about the transition, freshman Ethan Beach, number 55 said, "It has been hard, the conditioning and workouts are a lot harder than they used to be." This was only the beginning for these football players, as they continue their journey through football by going to the Junior Varsity team the next fall."

Never Give Up, Never Back Down!

Right: The color guard marching at the Veterans Day Parade in Manassas. This year the color guard had over thirty members, with fifteen rifles for the first song, eight main riles and six flag changes throughout the show. Both the color guard and the drum line came a week earlier than the rest of the band for band camp to get the counts and movements perfect for the show.

Below: Seniors Ryan Pfeifle, and Mitchell Ibarra, gathering the drum line to end a rehearsal. Drum line section leaders, senior Delmar Somosa and junior Justin Thorton, followed closely behind. Ryan stated that being the section leader was, "something that I've wanted to do since my freshman year of band, and I'm certainly glad and honored to have had the title of Drum Line Section leader for the Battlefield High School Marching Band."

Below: Senior and section leader of the trumpets Megan Kriss, and sophomore Jeremy Nelson playing stands tunes with other brass members during football games to get the crowd up on their feet! At home football games, the band was always an integral part to the experience to fans and the team. With fans right next to the band, singing along to familiar tunes. The "HEY" song could be heard throughout the parking lot and especially to the rival team whenever it is played.

Above Right: Senior drum majors Glendon Mohan and junior Lianna Smith conducting. This year's show was A Journey Through The Classics which featured approximately fifteen different well known classics from Beethoven to the Overture of 1812. A Journey Through The Classics also featured many arcs flag changes with complicated movements and music.

Right: The band meeting afterwards to assess the rehearsal. Tired but together, at the end of each day of practice, students went through the entire show one more time, called a last run-through to finish the day. These were both band traditions along with a very loud happy birthday sung by band members who soon found out why they are not in chorus, and read the wise verse from a Snapple cap before heading home.

Right: Senior Drum major Glendon Mohan and junior Drum major Lianna Smith conducting at the Worldstrides Heritage Preformance. This year Heritage uploaded A Journey Though the Classics online using You Tube.The students won Grand Champion in New Orleans giving them a National Championship title. Using any device with a QR scanner, watch this video now!

Below: Junior Drum major Lianna Smith leading the band in Jackson Square of the French quarter, New Orleans. The band preformed on the steps right in front of a a busy street literally giving a traffic stopping performance. Right before the show, everyone got excited as they saw the river boats, gas lanterns and heard the music of other bands playing--which was all orchestrated by Worldstrides Heritage Performance. For the New Orleans trip, the band had to memorize a new music for a halftime show with other bands from across the country; once there, the bands came to a mass rehearsal, never having met before, then played before thousands on national T.V.

Above: Senior Night for the Marching Bobcats starting with touching moments. Senior Rachel Whitney and her mother, Mrs. Whitney bonded as she pinned the flower on her daughter's uniform before escorting her onto the field for acknowledgment. Many Band and Varsity Football seniors were acknowledged during the 2011 fall season.

This year the Marching Bobcats had the honor to compete in the Allstate BCS National Championship. They won, and had the privilege to preform inside the stadium before the show, carry in the American flag, and perform a halftime show with other high school bands. While preparing for this great opportunity, students saw this sign in the stadium they would later put out a memorable show in.

WhenWeComeMarchingIn

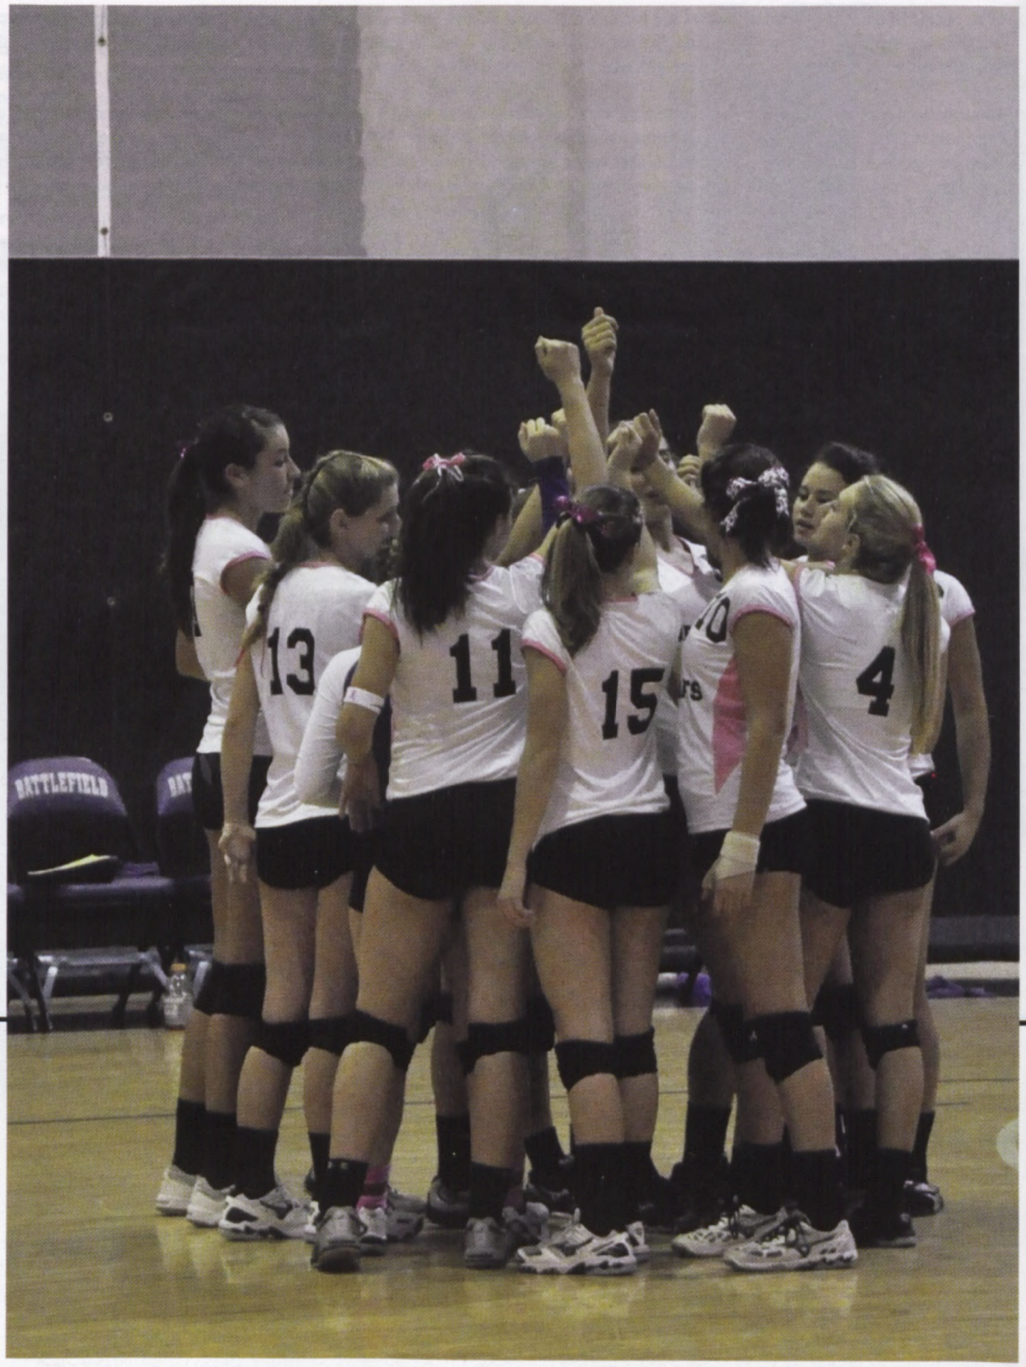

Marching Band

A full stadium, excitement everywhere, previous competitions, rehearsals, and even other bowl games, could not prepare students for the shock of thousands staring at them, waiting for them to perform. This year, the BHS Marching Band was inspiring as they took on challenges like cut rehearsal times, harder music, and harder set combinations in order to put on an undefeated show. Within the season and out of it, the Bobcats fought hard to get where they had been for years. Since the school opened in 2004, they have been a Virginia's Honor Band, getting Superior Ratings in all concert bands and at VBODA (marching assessment). Sophomore Anthony Vanderveldt stated that his favorite part was, "the adrenaline, the overwhelming feeling of joy, and the intoxicating passion of being on the field!" The color guard was another part of the band and traveled with them. When asked about what senior color guard member Tina Sepahpur liked best about marching , she quoted, "I've learned to work as a team. With practice comes perfection. No matter how hard something is, there's always a way around it." For senior Ryan Pfeifle, band was something he will take with him wherever he goes. "It's that moment of adrenaline at the end of the show, the final seconds as the music is flowing around you, and you smile, because you know you love what you're doing." The students in the marching program were proud of their achievements they have earned and the involvement in the program holds sentimental value for each member.

Varsity Volleyball

Through teamwork and dedication, the Varsity Volleyball team managed to achieve many goals this season. With the transition of moving up to varsity, along with the addition of new players, the Bobcats had to make adjustments to their new team. Senior Julie Leavitt commented, "Going from a junior to a senior, we are extremely motivated to prove our team's greatness. As far as bringing on new players, everyone has something good to bring to the table which has helped us to get where we are." As the team grew together as a family they were able to make many accomplishments and reach their goals. "As a whole, our main goal was to fight together as a team and not just as individuals," added senior Kiera Orris. The majority of the squad also agreed that their biggest accomplishment this season was their victory over Flint Hill. "That was really the first game all of us worked hard to make a comeback and win," senior captain Brigette Boyd stated. The varsity team created another new beginning for the volleyball program, and their hard work and persistence contributed to the success of their season. "Our team is defined by trust and a thin line of constructive criticism. To be a succeeding team we have to be able to help each other out without taking criticism to heart. On the court you have to trust that your teammate is going to do their job, and in return promise to do yours," Senior captain Arianna Gore stated as she described the Varsity Volleyball squad.

Once adjusted to the deafening white light, it was clear to see that the Lady Bobcats were not one to be messed with on the court. The JV team was filled with talent and a group of cohesive, determined girls. Luckily, only one player was lost to the new high school, Patriot. "It's so fun playing against our former teammates because we know their strengths and weaknesses." Sophomore Elizabeth Knight shared. "It's always cool to play former teammates because everyone plays with good intention. We want to win, but at the same time want to see them doing well" sophomore Brooke Lincoln said. Coach's Words

"The freshmen team had a successful season learning at the level of high school volleyball, which was new to a lot of players this season. As a team we had small goals that we set and accomplished one at a time, with those goals we were able to prepare ourselves for another exciting season next year. I am very proud of our Lady Bobcats for all the hard work and discipline they displayed this season."

Girls Varsity Basketball

The Battlefield High School Varsity Basketball Team bonded as a unit and improved from their previous season. With the leadership of their head coach Eric McCaslin, the team won a total of 12 games and lost 10. Freshman Misha Jones felt the team was like a family and stated, "Last summer, we went through a bunch of insane conditioning and weight-training clinics, and I think that is what has made us so close; because we got through it together." Senior Ashley Young also said, "My favorite part about the basketball team is that we are a family. We bond off the court which helped us play better on the court." Motivation was also what got the team through their training and difficult practices. Teammates reflected on the season fondly, and senior Ciara Williams recalled, "My favorite part about the team is that all of us motivate each other. Whether it is training, practice, or games, someone is always pushing you to work harder. We all have a special bond." The girls also planned on improving throughout the following year. Sophomore Abby Wescott said, "Our season this year was bitter-sweet. We grew a lot and really came together, but it ended too soon. We all are practicing for next season in our season workouts with our coaches. Next year we will be a whole new team because of how driven we are to succeed." Junior Jessi Whaley stated, "I'm looking forward to working hard and improving in the off season to have the best senior year possible." Overall, the Girls Varsity team had an outstanding season filled with motivation, improvement, and - most importantly - family.

Girls JV Basketball

"It is not how big you are, it is how big you play" ~John Wooden. Basketball was not played as an individual sport, but rather as a team. The key to success was teamwork. The Battlefield Girls JV Basketball team focused on the importance of teamwork while they dominated the courts. Sophomore Larissa Bierly said, "Rather than being a team, we are more like a family, all working together to achieve the same goal." The Lady Bobcats had an amazing season; they fought and gave it their all, until the very end of the season. "Basketball has taught me that in the long run, hard work pays off," reflected junior Alexis Fennel. The Lady Bobcats practiced with fiery persistence and confidence. The Girls JV Basketball team brought all their skills and determination to the courts and still seemed to have fun. Whether winning or losing the game, it was always a win for the Lady Bobcats, because they played with the fierceness of the Spartans and the tactfulness of the Athenians.

Girls Freshmen Basketball

As the youngest of the Balling Bobcats, members of the Freshmen Girls Basketball learned about not only basketball, but teamwork and what it meant to be a Bobcat. There were players on the team who had a wide range of experience; from players who had never played before to, some who had played since they were toddlers. Freshman Elizabeth Kim, who had not even picked up a ball before the season started, stated, "The coaches were so patient with me, and teaching me the skills of the game; they were amazing!" On the other hand, freshman Victoria Leathers had played since the age of two. She reflected on the new players and said, "This group of girls made the best of being new to the team through bonding and all-new experiences that came with being part of a team." Not only were the coaches supportive, but the girls also made time to get together off the court. Freshman Huda Abdulkadir added that the girls had sleepovers to create a bond on and off the court. Freshman Tiffany Mott summed it up by saying that her favorite aspect was, "meeting new people."

The drills the team practiced helped them stay humble and focused throughout games; and prevented them from receiving fouls.

Junior Terrell Walker at his finest, showing off a little bit at the Freedom game. Terrell had an amazing season with many blocks, steals and shots. With his senior year approaching Terrell will be one of many leading the team to the prize, which is the State Competition. Terrell was a huge asset to the team. Terrell stated "I like to score, because I feel accomplished, and the feeling of contributing to the team is what I love." He hoped to play basketball in college; he hopes to do that by improving his scoring skills and his favorite thing to do: dunking. Terrell had a truly amazing season. He said Coach Pauly was big help in all his accomplishments.

Boys Varsity Basketball

What gets the win, the talent or the hard work? The Battlefield Boys Varsity Basketball team proved that it was both. They had an amazing season; despite taking the loss to Broad Run to end their post season streak. Many of their teammates planned on playing in college, and were prepared for the future. With four seniors going off to bigger and better things next year, the rising class of 2013 would have to strive for even bigger and better accomplishments. When asked which traditions would be carried on next year, junior Tarik Diggs answered "praying before games." Diggs was also featured in the The News Messenger, and proved his leadership by staying motivated, and motivating the ones around him. Many of the boys on the team voted Tarik along with junior Roman Hall for the players who had come the furthest this season. No team was perfect, but it would seem so by the way the Battlefield boys played this season. When junior Roman Hall was asked what has Coach Pauly taught him, he answered "to play as a team and work hard, and strive to be the best you can possibly be." When asked what his favorite part about Bobcat Basketball was junior Jay Payton answered "I love playing basketball, but what makes it better is playing with the guys I grew up with. Daniel Cole was one of the four seniors on the team who graduated after leaving his mark on the court. Rising seniors, and rising juniors had States in sight for next year. They hoped to bring the trophy back to Battlefield. The entire team said Coach Pauly and everyone who contributed to the winning season was a great help, and will take their advice as far as basketball takes them.

JV Boys Basketball

The Battlefield Bobcats JV Boys Basketball team had a very successful 2011-2012 season, with a 16-2 record. Shooting guard sophomore Nicholas Sortzi who has been playing basketball since elementary school said, "The best part of the season was our fifteen point comeback against Pope John Paul. Being down by so much really made us work together as a team, and brought us closer together." Students showed great pride in the school basketball teams, and the support the players felt from the school made them want to play better, and leave their opponents on the court knowing they had played the Bobcats. Sophomore Albert (Tre) Ford commented, "Coach Coleman tells us before every game, greatness is not a measure of our natural abilities as much as it is a measure of our faith." Because of the great coaching staff the players wanted to play, not just to stay in shape or because their parents expected it, but because they knew they had a family behind them. The drive, talent, and passion all of the boys showed for the game ensured that won or lost, these fighting Bobcats stood together to represent Battlefield.

Every ounce of effort and dedication the team had was put into each game. Some played for passion, others played to stay in shape, but it was the close connection the team had that motivated them most. Freshman Matt Scott shared his thoughts on the season, "We're not the best team in the world, but we're still close and learning from our mistakes. I wouldn't change a thing." Despite their record at the end of the season, the Bobcats kept their heads up and continued to work hard. Freshman Sean Ehardt said, "My overall goal is to be a better player." The team practiced nonstop in hopes of improving, and to one day make it onto the varsity team. Freshman Nathaniel Chapman said, "I look up to Tarik Diggs," a junior on the varsity team. "Gymnastics tells you no. All day long. It mocks you over and over again. Telling you you're an idiot. That you're crazy. If you like running full-speed towards a stationary object, vault's for you. If you like pealing pieces of skin the size of quarters off your hands... bars is for you. Because the only thing more fun then rips, is when your rips get rips. It's super sexy. And floor, are you serious, I mean who doesn't want to parade around in a leotard getting wedgies and doing dorky choreography? It's delicious. StickIt! Gymnastics

The Battlefield Gymnastics team was defined by perseverance, agility, and strength. "Gymnastics teaches you that with persistence, hard work, and integrity, you can do anything!" commented junior Jena Schroeder. The amount of passion the Lady Bobcats had for their team was indescribable. The girls made sure to practice every day until every pointed toe was perfected and every floor routine was on point. For junior Kassie Krivo gymnastics was about being able to express herself. She said, "I love floor best. It's grace, power, and strength all rolled into one event. It's a great way to express ourselves through the music." Teamwork was incredibly important to the girls and it definitely showed during their meets. "As a team they had a first place finish at the Bobcat Stop Cancer Invitational, placed second at Districts and hit every single routine and had their highest team score of the season at Regionals," said Coach White. The BHS gymnastics team made gymnastics look seemingly easy through their determination, faith, and of course, spirit.

What went into making an unstoppable team? Hard work, patience, and a good pair of running shoes. "I had a neighbor who ran and is now ranked 45th in the nation-wide, so I always wanted to be like her," commented sophomore Mercedes Zuniga, whose passion started when she was young. Like Mercedes, who was inspired by a fellow runner, junior Nicole Carter was asked by a friend to join track. "It's fun to push myself to new limits. Running is a big stress reliever too," Nicole said about running. There were many things that the runners thought about at the beginning of a track meet. A few tried to clear their heads of all things but running and reaching the goal. Some thought of songs to get them motivated. Junior Connor Lee got himself ready and in the right mind set while at the starting line. He told himself, "Don't jump the gun... and I remind myself to breathe." Through hard work, determination and focus, the track team focused on attaining success.

Swim Team

Swim team at Battlefield took a lot of commitment and hard work throughout the season. After all of the practices and meets, the team was like a family. They helped support each other to grow in character and sportsmanship. Although the people on the teams may have changed, the traditions always stayed the same. Junior Nina Tremols said, "Our traditions are what bring us together as a family." 2012 was a big year for the Battlefield Swim Team. Many swimmers qualified for regionals; a select few went to states. It took a lot of dedication to make it all the way to states. Senior Holly Criscuolo agreed, "I have been swimming since I was five. From then until now, I give it my all. From the moment I dive in, to the end of practice, I always try my hardest." It is safe to say the swim team accomplished an impressive amount during the season. They retained their title as District Champions and had a great showing at States; having more students attend tates than any other year. This season was only just the beginning of a legacy of success.

Wrestling

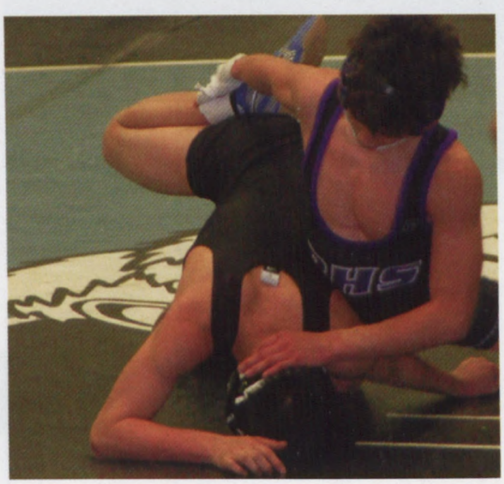

Starting in mid November, the brave few students hit the mat to begin the season. The team practiced every day after school in either the gym or the mat room. The Bobcats began the season at Dinnwiddie High School near Richmond. The season continued for the next three months, which to a wrestler can seem like forever. When asked about how the season differed from the previous season, Senior Joshua Wilkens said, "I think there has definitely been a greater sense of unity and teamwork than in previous years."

Constantly managing weight and the long practices led the Bobcats to the District tournament. With six finalists and two District Champions, Freshman Matthew Asper and Senior Jacob Payne, Battlefield won the District title. Junior Andrew Thomas said "It was insane that we won." This being the first in school history. The team now can begin building depth for future year. Because there is a goal to work for, we fight for everything and none of us give up!" The Lady Bobcats always gave it their all to win the games, freshman Kristin Gobbi said, " Making new friends and having fun causes us to progress as a team." Every member in a team has to be supportive, freshman Morgan Leonard shared,"They support me in a good way, and that gives the team encouragement, because we never know if we are going to win or lose!" They worked hard through out the season and all that work paid off.

Boys Varsity Lacrosse

Boys Lacrosse faced a huge challenge this year. They had to mend a group of new players together to form a team. Technique, commitment, and endurance meant everything to the boys. The team knew this and rose up to the challenge. The season officially started in February, but the month on the calendar was not relevant to the team. They trained, conditioned, and worked their hardest for months before the season started. Sophomore Aaron Turner said, "We prepare for the season with summer camps, conditioning, and a lot of practice." During the season, the group became a team and strategies became second nature. This was not an easy job commented senior Sam McCain, "We were mindful of our goals this season. We had a water polo league, we played hockey, and hung out together outside of practice." The BHS Boys Varsity Lacrosse earned many victories this year. At the end of the season, they realized they grew in more than just skill and strength, but in sportsmanship. The team can use what they have learned for the rest of their lives.

Boys Junior Varsity Lacrosse

Lacrosse was a sport that many BHS students looked forward to as spring began. This year the Junior Varsity team consisted of only sophomores and freshmen. All the team members worked hard throughout the whole season. They started practicing at the end of February. The boys sometimes practiced with the Varsity players so they could learn to play their games better. Sophomore Justin Wilkins said, "I enjoy playing lacrosse and I have a great time playing the game with my friends." So many of the students truly love the game. Freshman Kevin Sheehan commented, "I've loved lacrosse ever since my first season, its so fast and intense." Lacrosse Coach Marsh inspired his team to do better every time, they stepped out on the the field. Sophomore Michael Chambers stated that, "Coach encourages and motivates us to maintain a positive attitude going into the games, he also goes over the game plan to remind us our jobs out on the filed." These boys worked hard all year, and no matter if they won or lost they were always a team.

Girls Varsity Soccer

Soccer required determination and communication from all its members throughout the season. A single player was nothing without the rest of their team. Any girl on the team, new or returning would say the same. To keep up this unity, the team had sleepovers and team dinners. Coaches Kevin Hilton and Timothy Coughlin helped these girls succeed and achieve their goals. Junior Sarai Arbus said, "the coaches are really cool, they are good coaches, they are making us a lot better as a team." Grade levels on the team ranged all over, from freshman to seniors, and everyone had the same goals. Freshman Rebecca Callison felt "honored to be part of such a great group of girls." The seniors and even some juniors were excited to make a new soccer career for themselves in college. Junior Brianna Toelle already planned on playing at the University of Iowa. Bri was new on the BHS team, and she felt honored to make the team her first year. She commented, "It gives me the opportunity to play with other talented players and meet new people." When it came to Battlefield soccer, every Bobcat came together as one.

While these girls are the youngest of the soccer bunch, they still brought heat to the soccer field. Freshman Katherine Chang assured,"I have been playing since I was four. I can bring the aggressiveness to the field." Clearly these girls had some fire. Effective communication was one of their assets, and offering encouragement was one of their priorities. Their season started off great as freshman Emma Boyd recalled, "Freshman Jordan Robson shot an amazing header goal in the last seconds of our game." Not only did they show skill, but they also grew as a team through bonding. Freshman Jenna Day laughed, "[Freshman] Margaret Hudak sings a melody of Disney songs throughout every practice!" Chang added, "We are all friends on and off the field. We hang around school and many other places." This group of girls began their high school soccer careers with fierce goals and many hoped to advance to varsity next year.

Varsity Soccer

In mid-February the soccer team started their season. They opened the season with a scrimmage against North Stafford, last year's State Champions. They won the scrimmage with a score of 1-0. The Varsity Soccer team was more like one big family, than just a team. They would practice hard everyday after school, and when game time came they played as one. Winning a game was not everything to the team, what was more important is knowing that they played together and that they tried their best. As a freshman on the team Alec Sullivan said "I like that everyone is really helpful, gives me advice, and accepts that I'm a freshman." Although losing talented seniors from last year, the team has also gained new talent. People that had tried out last year worked hard, and made it on to Varsity. Sophomore Jaime Delao commented "The team has improved since last year, we might do better this year because of our new coaching." Hoping for the best as the season continued, the soccer team looked forward to the challenging obstacles ahead.

Soccer is a full body, and mind, sport. Junior Varsity Soccer was lead by Coach Bretsch. Earlier this season Coach Bretsch said, "I coach for the love of the game, and for the kids." As a high schooler he played soccer and continued to spread his love of the game. Sophomore William Hernandez said, "I play soccer because it's fun and I can take my anger out on the field, it's a good stress reliever." Most practices were focused on conditioning and drills. By working on endurance and building strength, the players were able to improve their skills to bring to the game for more wins. Junior Juan Cua said, "I get my energy up by listening to Spanish music." Even though the practices were tough, and each player had a different way of preparing for games, they all came together to make Battlefield's Junior Varsity soccer team the best it could be.

Varsity Softball

Varsity softball girls worked very hard this past season. They put all of their hearts into every single game they played. It takes commitment and strength to do as well as the ladies did. "We always go all out at practice, we never just put 50% in," said junior Anna Johnston. The varsity team always ran out on the field with full pride of being a Bobcat. It was a difficult sport to take on, but the girls showed their full endurance on and off the field. Preparing for games was not an easy task, "It took time and patience for both the coaches and us, but we would always end up doing great," said sophomore Samantha Brosnahan. Family were a big support for the team. They helped the ladies get their confidence up on the field so that they would conquer the other team. "I love when my family comes out and supports me, it makes me feel much more comfortable when I am on the field," said junior Sommers Taylor. The varsity team made all of Battlefield, and themselves, proud over the season, and hoped to do it all again next season.

Since its debut with the school's opening in 2004, the JV Softball program was a consistently solid one. The team boasted a strong beginning of the season with three wins and a tie. Sophomore Jessica Javier said, "This team has so many talented young women with great potential. With hard work, positive vibes, and incredible coaches, we are capable of racking up as many wins as we do." That positive attitude, paired with a faithful love of the game, drove the team to be a force worth reckoning with. Freshman Elizabeth Meston said, "Softball is like love. First you learn the rules of the game; eventually you forget the rules and play with your heart." The players bonded on and off the field, which allowed them to become a close-knit team that fought hard for victory. Freshman Courtney Bowman said "As teammates, we are always there for one another...everyone has everyone's back and we dream big and work hard. "Win or lose, they learned valuable lessons on the field that would remain with them for years to come." ~Caitlyn Moore

This season the Boys Tennis Team fought to become not just many individuals on separate courts, but one unit, working hard and helping each other in order to achieve greatness. As they grew closer as a team, these hardworking Bobcats took one challenge at a time together. Senior Sean Ross stated that, "Despite the fact that we all play separately, what makes this team strong is that none of us EVER take the court alone!" Take the court they did and they were the first in the school district to go to district championships. Junior Michael Mahoney or "Mikey" says, "I like to play tennis and this season we will be, by far, the best of the best." Tennis is one of the many great sports Battlefield has to offer, and for years has been a fun sport to take part in. Senior Harold Shin stated, "I've been playing all four years, and with how nice everyone is makes, it so much easier to be on the team." They made Battlefield proud this season by showing their hard work, integrity and character on and off the courts to make it to the top.

Academics

The Ending Grades are Only a Factor in the New Phase

When looking back on high school, memories were not made of what was learned, but what was done. However, academics got people where they wanted to go. Whether it was getting into the college they wanted, getting the job they desired, or simply being excited to get through high school, success in academics helped them achieve their dreams. Through all the tests, labs, mid-terms, finals, SOLs, research papers, quizzes, projects and papers, the four-year journey was one that was not traveled alone. Peers, classmates, coaches, teachers, friends, counselors, and advisers were with students and guided them to their fullest potential.

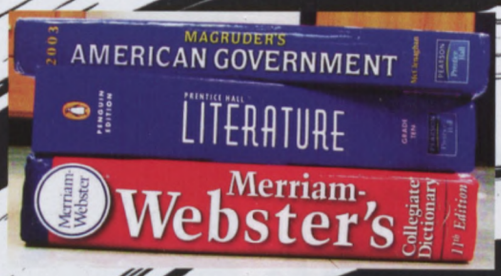

To the freshman: the journey has just begun. Keep up the hard work and push through all the assignments to reach the goals that have been set. To the sophomores: half way through! Good luck with the English SOL, research paper and all the other classes! To the juniors: congratulations on completing the toughest year of English with the SOL and the research paper! To the seniors: congratulations on completing all the high school requirements! They've been through it all, Health, Drivers Ed, CPR, research papers, SOLs, exams, current events, SAT vocabulary lessons every year, foreign language classes, summer AP assignments and much more. Good luck with the future!

Air Force JROTC- strict, fun, and extremely active in everything they do! Air Force JROTC trains cadets in mentality of the Air Force. Everything they do models the life of a a cadet in the Air Force. The instructors Lt. Col. Cartee and SMSGT Shuler led the color guard in a large number of Battlefield activities. They began every athletic and school event with the presenting of the colors. The presentation of the colors is when JROTC students in uniform march with the American Flag, Virginia State flag, Air Force flag and two rifles in an opening ceremony.

The cadets start as an Airman Basic and build their way up to being a higher rank. "Integrity first, service before self, and excellence in all we do," are the core values of the Air Force. Sophomore Justin Newsome said simply put,"Shut up and listen."

Cadet Lt. COl. Kathryn Schmidt said," Most defiantly we learn something new and experience something new." Cadet 2nd L. Minter helped teach the AS1(first years in training), she said "In AS1 they learn how to drill, the ranks, uniform wear, and the history of AFJROTC with the help of upper class man."

Right: The color guard, made up of senior Kathryn Schmidt, sophomores Ellie Grove, Mia Cangiano, and Zachary Creech practice color presentation for the upcoming homecoming football game. AF JROTC was asked to help present the flag at various school functions. These students learned that the flag symbolizes freedom and the soldiers who fight to defend it. Provided by: Jorge Jatib

Lt. Colonel Cartee was honored this year by being nominated for the Agnes Meyers Award by the BHS staff. "Each year, The Washington Post honors exceptional men and women in the teaching profession. They award an outstanding teacher selected out of each of the 19 local public school systems in the metropolitan area" His reaction to his nomination was "shock and disbelief. While I know what the award means, I never expected to receive this this distinction. There are so many truly outstanding teachers at Battlefield High School, I guess I never saw myself as one in that category. I hope that the nomination does not change my teaching style. I still want to be a student-centered teacher; one who is remembered as holding themselves, and their students accountable for everyday doing their best."

Right: The Color guard is at the football game being inspected by Cadet Joseph Womack. The presentation of the colors is something that air force cadets do at the beginning of football games and other sporting events.

Below: Junior Cadet 2nd Lt. Minter aiding freshman Cadet Kyle with his book work. The JROTC book work is what every cadet must do to learn military history, etiquette and leadership skills. Cadets have to learn everything the AFJROTC has in the academic program.

Lower Left: The squad Foxtrot standing at attention. Every Freshman in JROTC was required to learn their commands, which all cadets must know.

Left: The Color guard in an orderly line getting ready to get on the football field to do the presentation of the colors. The cadets went on the field and represented the colors. The presenting of the colors is important, because it respects the flags that they represented.

CaptureA Memory
Photography

With every photo, a memory is captured. They can record and portray a feeling, or an experience. At Battlefield, kids had the opportunity of taking Photography I or Photography II. In the class, students were able to learn how to work a camera and develop pictures. Senior Gina Nilsen said, "I like developing pictures in the darkroom." However, some students wanted to make photography a profession, and these classes helped them in their future. Photography class allowed students to express their feelings through a picture. For instance, senior Victoria DiMatteo said, "Photography is an outlet of emotion and expression." Through taking pictures and developing film, students learned how to show an expression that they were truly interested in having. Senior Kate Renner stated, "I like the ability to manipulate photos and capture what you see in a different way." Photography relates to everyone by giving them the opportunity to relieve stress, and express their feelings about the past and for the future.

Right: Senior Abby Regis taking a picture for her Photography I class. She was working on a project that showcased her ability in taking a photo. They were able to work on focusing in on an object and create an inspirational picture.

Right: Junior Nicole Zierke focusing on the roll of film that she has developed. She hoped that the pictures captured turned out just right. With the film developed perfectly, she was able to flaunt her ability of photography through final product, the pictures.

Left: Junior Whitney Burns checking on her film which is in the process of developing in the dark room. She made sure that all the photos that were taken were exactly what she wanted. After taking pictures, most students worked on the film to develop it correctly.

Below Left: Photography teacher, Ms. Geotz, helping her student, senior Hailey Music, while analyzing her pictures. She gave her ideas and different perspectives to students to consider when she works with a photograph. In Photography class, a student learned how to take pictures and develop them, and also the techniques on how to edit them.

Below: This interpretation by junior Annalie Robinson shows her creativity. This was an iT Photography project in which students were asked to interpret Surrealism into a photograph. Annalie showed her unique perspective of a scene emerging from a book.

Above: Seniors Lea LaConia and Danya Galdamez working with photo shop to create a piece that represents themselves. They focused on the meaning of the work they were creating, with a goal to send a message. They were able to express their feelings in the pictures that they created on Photoshop.

Left: Senior Faith Thomas looking up at the light in the dark room, trying to see the film that she just developed. The light helped her get a good look at the pictures that she had taken. Faith stated, "I like how everything is original."

Above: In a design by junior Jordan Bard, he says, "For this drawing, I got my inspiration from Vince Van Gogh, a famous Dutch artist." He follows his work as he goes through the art class.

Artistic

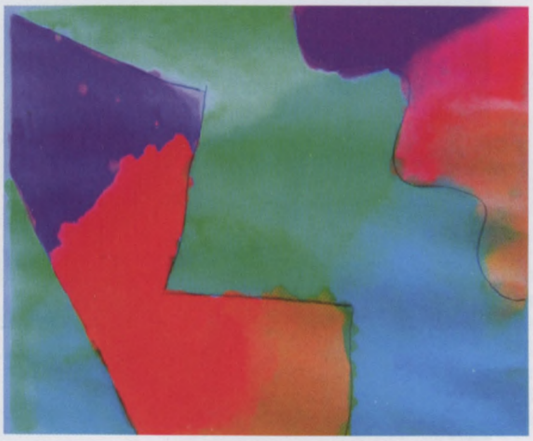

Beginning to End

From B.C.E to 2011, art has never changed, only grown more inspired by how the world is evolving. It is a way for an adult, or even a child, to express how they are feeling and escape reality. In high school, the students are able to focus on art and relax, instead of worrying about homework or drama. Thein Dao, a sophomore says, "I like doing abstract drawing in the class and also love the teacher and sometimes strive for perfection in my work." Instead of sticking to a schedule, the students are in class, relieving stress or learn about shapes, and blending colors. First they start with the basics and learn the different types of lines, and design then most students move up to the class Advanced Art after taking Art 1 and 2. Junior Thomas Dean, a lacrosse player says, " I only did art to put more of my attention on lax, but it's helping me get in touch with my feelings more." Most students love the art program here at the school and enjoy the classes and the teachers as well. Art allows students express their emotions, also it helped with an individual's future. Art helped those who wished to major in architecture or even math, by introducing the different shapes and 3-D imagines. Jordan Bard notes, " I hope that I can do art next year and even for the rest of my life." Art is everywhere; it has been there in our past, is in our present, and will be there in the future.

~Allyson Keeney

Left: Junior Rachael Holt, says she gets inspired by her family and draws because it is calming. She liked the class because any person is able to do it and can do whatever they want in their art work. Art produced by students could be find throughout the halls.

Left: Junior Veronica Crochet's art work from her first period art class was created with water colors. She was aiming for to blending the colors. Veronica says "It [painting] is a way to be expressive."

Below: Freshman Caroline Draper sits in first period and works on her new art project. She writes her name in a scripture design while the sun beams in on her first period class. When Caroline finishes, the whole page with be filled with her feelings and inspiration.

Left: Ms. McGann assists her student, sophomore Laura Torrico, on her assignment. She leads her into a more deep and thoughtful process of art and how you can put your feelings on a page. This lets her express her emotions through art.

Right: Freshman, Sedra SediQi and Drew Raodarmol work on their water paintings. Mixing colors and conversing about what will look best on the paper.

Right: Sophomore Anthony Vanderveldt and freshman Sean Ferris practicing their new piece of music. Everyone was very concentrated on hitting all the notes while playing their beautiful music. The dedication of the clarinet players was evident in every practice and concert.

Right: Sophomore Jocelyn Cho playing the flute. Flutes were just one of the many instruments that were played in Battlefield's band classes. Each instruments played a vital part in making the amazing band.

BringingItBach

Band

Band. A company of persons, joined, acting, or functioning together (Dictionary.com). At Battlefield, that is exactly what Band did. Together, under the direction of Mr. Brodt, all of the Band Classes blended together. The result was a Band that became like a family. Freshman Laura Isbell stated her favorite part of Band as the bonds that were made, she said they were like a "band family." From concert to symphonic, the Band kids displayed their talents and helped each other work through difficult pieces of music, and the challenges of working together as a Band. Sophomore Alberto Post said he was looking forward to his upcoming years in band and "becoming an upperclassmen and helping the underclassman." Mr. Brodt taught of all Band classes during school including Wind Symphony, Concert, and Symphonic; as well as the Marching Band after school (see the Athletics section for more Marching Band coverage). "Mr. Brodt is awesome! He is an amazing teacher," raved junior Dylan Thomas who had Mr. Brodt for three years. In Band, the students ranged from underclassmen to upperclassmen; with each class containing a blend of students.

Many students made the transition from their middle school bands to high school band, sophomore Karen Tran compared high school band to middle school band saying, "High school band is more serious and focused." Being in Band was a great opportunity for future musicians, and people who wanted to expand their knowledge of musical instruments and become accomplished in the world of music.

Left: Seniors Christian Go and Colin Fowler can be found in the percussion section. These two had to focus on keeping the beat during one of their songs. For these gentlemen, timing was everything! Below: In Mr. Brodt's second period symphonic band sophomore Noah Crowder, junior Cody Ellis, and freshman Roy Watson are all playing their trombones. These gentlemen could always be found concentrating on the piece they played. Symphonic band required synchronization and focus.

Below: Junior Tyler Theal, sophomore Karen Tran, and senior Mark Young having tons of fun playing their saxophones. In band, different groups would challenge each other on who could play their song better. There was always some friendly rivalry going on.

"Never give up, Never back down. Work hard, play harder, and get where you want to go. Always be proud of what you do."

Governor's School @ Innovation Park

Below: Seniors Josh Paquin and Andreas Revilak hold up another senior, Angela Cho, and place her on top of toothpick structure to see if the toothpick structure would hold. Students were assigned to create the strongest structure made out of just glue and toothpicks; the strongest almost held Angela! GS@IP provides unique opportunities for students to do cool and fun projects like this one.

What is Governor's School? Many Battlefield students have heard of this program, but not many truly know what it is. The Governor's School @ Innovation Park (GS@IP), the official name, is one of the nineteen Governor's year-round schools in Virginia and the only one to be affiliated with a four year college, George Mason. GS@IP concentrates on the four STEM subjects – science, technology, engineering, and math. Similar to Thomas Jefferson High School, the Governor's School @ Innovation Park is a rigorous but rewarding program for students who love the STEM disciplines.

Students apply to attend GS@IP from three different counties, Prince William, Manassas Park, and Manassas City. After turning in applications, GS@IP students are chosen by a selective process which includes a thorough review of the applications and series of timed tests. The group of individuals selected to attend GS@IP create a supportive learning community. Senior Hoyoung Le, who attends GS@IP, says that this community, created by like-minded students as well as challenging teachers, is his favorite part of GS@IP.

Battlefield students who are a part of GS@IP get the best of both worlds. These hybrid students attend classes at Innovation Park in the morning and then come back to Battlefield for two classes, while also participating in after school sports and activities. Because GS@IP concentrates on STEM, students take math and science classes on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Friday. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, students take a Research Application Integration (RAI) class and a mentorship class. RAI is a unique class where students can choose to take an official engineering class, an AutoCad class, or a modular class. During modular class, cool little projects are assigned such as making the strongest toothpick structure or creating a Rube Goldberg Device. During mentorship time, students are able to perform independent research with professionals such as engineers and George Mason professors. Another senior at GS@IP, Megan Yetman, says that the lab and resources provided by George Mason and the opportunity to work in them was her favorite part of the program.

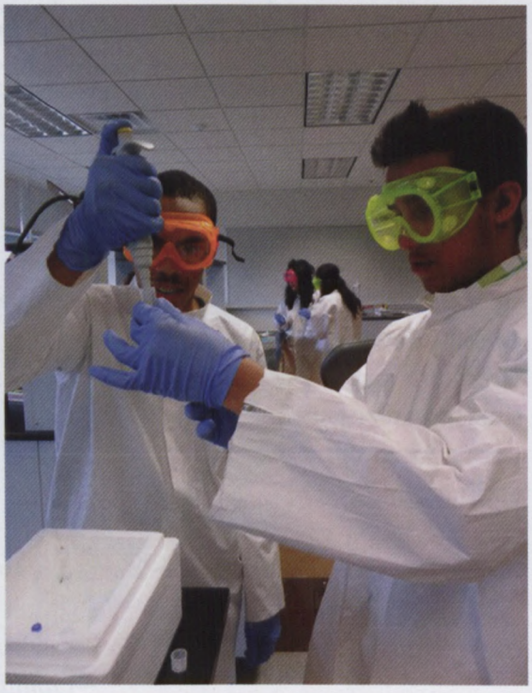

For the seniors this year at GS@IP, entering this program last year was truly a new beginning. The Governor's School @ Innovation Park opened just last year, with the seniors this year as its first ever students. There were definitely rough patches through the first two years, but the seniors could proudly say that they survived! Now these seniors look towards college as another fresh chapter. Senior Cathleen Chong said that she is excited for the dorm experience and the independence that comes with college. When asked what she sees herself doing in the next twenty years, Cathleen said that she saw herself researching to find a source of sustainable energy for third world countries. Like Cathleen, all of the other seniors and juniors at GS@IP set high goals for themselves, hoping to one day make a difference; Governor's School @ Innovation Park is only the beginning.

~Angela Cho

Right: Governor's School senior Hoyoung Lee, walks down the hall to go to class. Governor's School is actually homed at George Mason University. Although Governor's School students do not interact with GMU students; however, Governor's School students have the opportunity to work in labs and learn in GMU classrooms.

Below: Senior Varun Gupta is carefully holding a test tube while his partner mixes the content within the tube. Students at GS@IP are provided time to work in the lab during their science and mentorship classes. These opportunities allowed them real life experience.

Left: Junior Caylin Dawson completes physics problems on the board. One of the Governor's School's goals is for students to fully understand the concepts that they learn. Writing on the board helped students solve problems because it gave them a blank space to think and work out problems and solutions.

Seniors Varun Gupta, Andreas Revilak, and Josh Paquin study hard during their math class. The Governor's School @ Innovation Park provided advanced math and science classes such as multivariable calculus, linear algebra, organic chemistry, and anatomy and physiology. Students study hard to succeed in these challenging classes.

Marketing
Sports, Fashion, Business

End of a class beginning of a career. Sports, Fashion and Business Marketing classes helped prepare students for the real marketing world.

These classes helped students outside of school too by teaching them about when, how and why marketing works. In the second period Business and Marketing class, senior Javon Nelson said, "Marketing classes help students outside of school more than any other subject." Senior Savannah Hedquist commented, "A lot of things done in these classes has to do with DECA and helps students participate in the club outside of school."

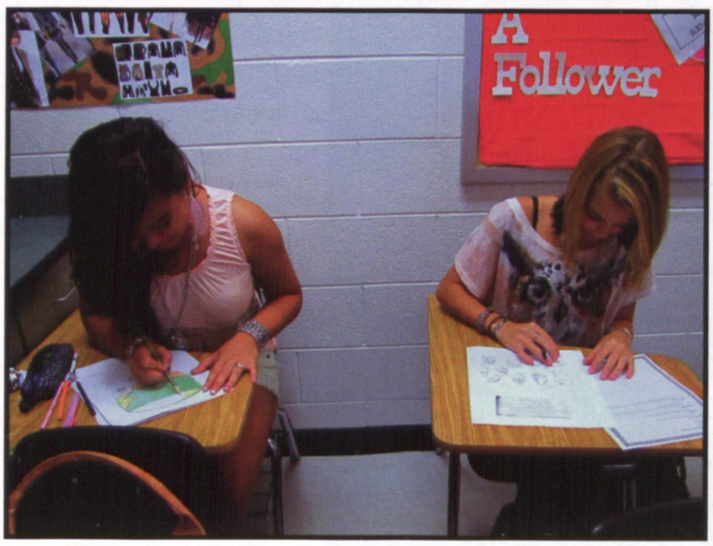

In Business students learned how to use their money more wisely and budget more effectively by helping students understand the true business world. In the second period Business and Marketing class, senior Allen Baltimore says, " The Business and Marketing class helps students understand how to advertise things" and "students learn a lot in this class, but at the same time its a relaxed environment."

In Sports Marketing students learned the business behind the sports. Sports Marketing also helped students develop a thorough understanding of the marketing concepts and theories that apply to sports and events.

~Camille Wead

Fashion Marketing always has students doing something fun. In Mrs. Smith's seventh period class, Juniors Michael Hanlon and Justin Dobak looked up high fashion while deciding what the textures of the pictures are.

Above: Seniors Arielle Ordinario, and Kylie Christensen, get to work and enjoy their fun fashionable projects in the laid back atmosphere of their fashion marketing class. By drawing and expressing their ideas on paper, the endless possibilities are shown.

In Fashion Marketing, students learn what the true definition of fashion is, as well as many other concepts and marketing skills. In the seventh period Fashion Marketing class, junior Natalie Schroeder said, " Before I took the fashion marketing class, I didn't really understand the concept of fashion, but now I notice every type of style, design, and detail of objects around me." Junior Megan Villavicencio commented, "Marketing has helped me because I now understand how big clothing stores choose and pick their clothes to sell to the public."

Left: Juniors Natalie Schroeder and Megan Villavicencio, discuss how their marketing class helps them in the real world. Students discovered that marketing was all around them, from magazines, to television to their iPods.

Below Left: Sports Marketing class is hard at work discussing and writing down their ideas. While they compared ideas, the students were able to gain different perspectives on marketing.

Below: Juniors Lonnie Finley, and Jerson Del Rosario, work on their class project. They worked hard to write about sports franchising and applied what they learned in class.

A Future In Fashion

Junior Madison Marcoux took Fashion Marketing because, she was interested in the different trends and styles. She loved the projects and planned on using Fashion Marketing after high school by designing clothes. The advice she gave to a student planning on taking the class is to enjoy fashion; the teachers are really nice and it is a free class to be with friends and learn about fashion all at the same time.

Right: Juniors Cayla Costello, Emily Argueta, and Jill Jamison practicing singing a piece for the winter concert. At the winter concert, which took place in December, all choirs performed the pieces they have been meticulous working on. Chorus students push themselves to be the very best at what they do.

Six Ensembles One Family

Chorus

Right: Junior Mathew Bui, senior Vaughn Land, and junior Jack Kulick reading over their music for their upcoming concert. they had little time, yet they worked diligently to improve before the winter concert.

Chorus was the place where dreams were discovered, passions were ignited, and friendships stuck from beginning to end. In Chorus, students learned how to sight read, which means reading music. They also learned music theory. Senior Marc Zalaskus commented, " Chorus is challenging but it truly gives you a chance to be apart of a team and expand your musical understanding. After leaving choir, there's no doubt you will have a deep appreciation for the arts."

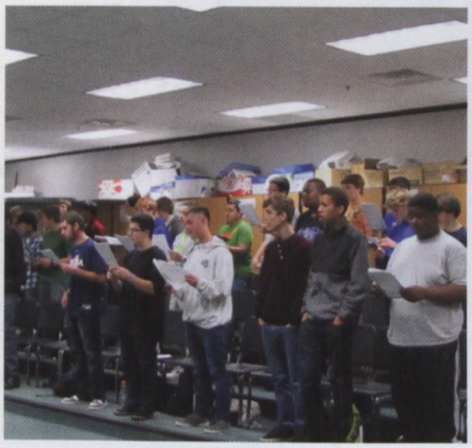

Chorus students made friends that lasted them through their high school years. Junior Veronica Crochet says "I like how close we become, it's like a family." Even though there are six different ensembles, Treble, Varsity, Donne Coro, Mens Choir, Bel Canto, and Battlefield Singers to audition for, friendships are still made between the ensembles.

Junior Nicole Sanregret commented, "One thing I like about chorus is the camaraderie between all of the students. In chorus we help one another grow and support each other throughout the year." It was once said that Music feeds the teenage soul. Junior Stanley Muckerman commented, "I choose to take choir because I've loved music and I look forward to the opportunity to sing everyday. No matter what is happening in my life, singing will always be there to brighten my day."

Here's to song, here's to time;
Here's to both with friends of mine;
Here's to friends who raise their voices high.
Kings have riches widely lain,
Lords have land, but then again,
We have friends and song no wealth can buy.

CreativityIsTheKeytoSuccess

Creative Writing

Above Juniors Rachael Holt and Chloe Wooten are deep in thought about their writing assignment. They had been assigned to write a piece for online literary magazine. Teamwork was an important part of Creative Writing when writing and editing projects.

When the modern world is consumed with technology, the written word tends to be neglected. Creative Writing displayed how necessary writing is, even in the current day. Creative Writing helped teens develop a life-long passion for expressing themselves through the deep and meaningful words of the English language. Senior Caileigh Bravo stated, "I took Creative Writing because I have always wanted the freedom to write about what I want and not a topic for a paper. I love it." The class gave students a sense of freedom to be who they were; a refreshing change from the standardized required writing in other classes.

Sophomore Karen Taylor said, "The most interesting part of the class is listening to other people's work." Kids are able to share their writing with other students. Creative Writing helped kids express themselves through words and phrases. The class published a literary magazine The Troubadour in which not only students in the class, but anyone from the student body could contribute. Students in class worked on writing, editing and judging writing samples submitted for publication. Battlefield students could also contribute artwork and photography. Magazines went on sale to the student body in the spring.

Below: Junior Cadence Brookfield, seniors Devynn Fisher and Becca Arce, and junior Kip Prather are all discussing their plans for their next writing piece. They enjoyed their time during creative writing. These students got along well and worked together to make their writing interesting.

StrivingToImprove HowStudentsWrite

Bobcat Writing Center

Senior Dylan Nahra helps a student on a writing assignment. He assisted many kids with their school work at the Writing Center. Dylan was a lead tutor who controlled Public Relations for the Bobcat Writing Center.

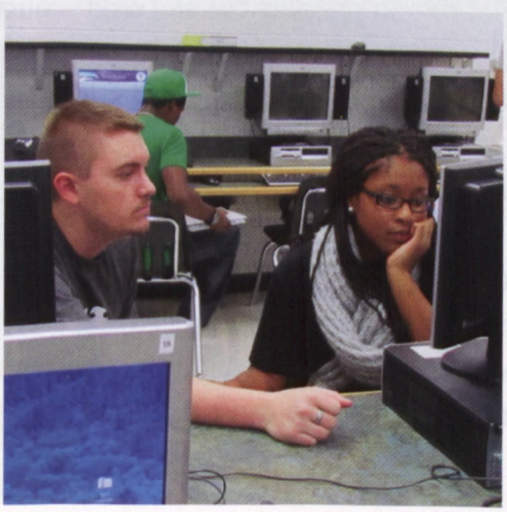

For some juniors, the research paper was too much work to do on their own. Other classes and their writing projects add to the stress and students begin to feel behind. To improve writing for any class, the Writing Center was there to help. Junior Remi Hedges used this to her advantage and commented, "I have to get caught up with my research paper!" People like Remi were aided in their writing throughout the year, and were able to get caught up and stay on track with their assignments.

This has been the Writing Center's second year and it can only get better from here. Senior Lauren Budzichowski had this to say, "I feel like after this year, there will be more knowledge of the [resource] so there will be more students coming in for help and more tutors to teach them." Lauren is a senior tutor for the Writing Center so she understands how helpful the center can be to students.

The Writing Center was run by tutors after school on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2-4 p.m. Students were always welcome to come for help. Tutors helped students with a variety of topics such as research, grammar, tutoring in a variety of subjects, and much more.

~Melian Miller

Senior Jordyn Imber is editing someone's paper at the writing center. She was a tutor for the Writing Center. Tutors helped with any subject or size of assignment.

Senior tutor, Marc Zalaskus, helps junior Erika "Ariana" Creque on a writing assignment. Ariana needed assistance writing for her research paper. The writing center was student run and supervised by Ms. Chabot and Mrs. Haemker.

Right: Senior Tatiana Norman working hard on an assignment to get ahead in class. Even though Criminal Justice was a hands on class, there was classwork time as well. Knowledge is a key part of succeeding in a career in the Criminal Justice Field.

CriminalJustice

Right: Senior Zachary Bruckschen is focused on taking notes about building safety in Criminal Justice. Note taking was an necessary part of Criminal Justice, it was the most effective way to learn about the system. Safety in a building was an important part in preventing crime and keeping people safe from danger.

Embarking on a Career in the Field

Criminal Justice was not just an ordinary "sit and read" course. It involved learning defense tactics, crime scene investigation, as well as an in-depth study of crimes and laws. "I learned new ways to better protect myself, my family, and my friends," said junior Michael Hudak. In addition to defense tactics, students studied laws, crimes, and every part of the legal system. Junior Ryan Miller said, "Criminal Justice taught me everything I need to know about the legal system". Also, students gained knowledge needed to be better prepared for a career in the field, while having a great time. Junior Tabatha Titus said, "Criminal Justice is a great class to have fun in and take out your stress." Students had many opportunities to do exciting exercises and have also have a great time. Students are exposed to many career choices, and learn self defense as well. Junior Salvatore Rotante said, "Its like having the most delicious chicken wings in the world.....with dipping sauce."

~Emanuel Castaneda

Left: Junior Alexi Giannelli is in the middle of a defense and tactics lesson with Mr. Fletcher. Learning strikes and blocks were an important part of Criminal Justice. Students who finished this class were better prepared in situations that may require them to defend themselves.

Left: Juniors Ryan Miller and Andrew Thomas are doing sit-ups for their fitness evaluation. The fitness evaluation was to test a student's endurance and strength. Fitness was an important part of the criminal justice curriculum and staying fit helped students in a career in the system.

Above: Junior Obaid Rafiqzad trains hard and does his best when being evaluated for strength. Even though criminal justice had a fitness evaluation test, there was no pressure if students were not "fit" or "strong" as long as they tried their best. For those students they learned that everything in life can begin for them if they try their best, even if they fail, at least they can say "I tried."

Method acting helped them immerse themselves in roles and commit to their character

The Theater Department, whether class or club, was taught to suspend the belief through productions of well known plays. "You can take what you learn each year and become more knowledgeable about theater. It's a never ending cycle, because you're always learning new things to add onto a performance," said sophomore Emma Wedemeyer. When constantly changing the perception of a show, it is always nice to get feedback from peers. "My favorite part about Drama Club is being a part of a family and being able to make something like a show with your friends come together after all of the hard work you put into it," stated sophomore Molly Mangan. All members contributed to what was seen on stage, including techies who created sets for the productions. "Theater is important to me because it is my passion. It helped me become who I am. It helped shape me over the past four years," commented senior Taylor Pender. Drama Class was a good way to express one's self and gain new friends, because all the members were welcoming, supportive, and friendly.

Health& PhysicalEducation

It is that period most high school students dread....Physical Education and Health Class. A typical day in P.E. included activities that stressed the importance of good physical and emotional health. some activities included basketball, running, soccer, and the Olympic games. Students have mixed feelings about P.E. "I hate waking up at 5 in the morning to go change out for first period which is P.E," said sophomore Kennedy O'Brien. Even though it was hard to wake up in the morning, it had its upsides. "I like health and P.E. because I get to see all my friends," stated sophomore Jack Eybers.

Advanced P.E. is offered at Battlefield High School for upper classmen. Senior Eric Taub said, "I took Advanced P.E. so I can remember all the exercises we learned and use them later in life to stay in shape." Mr. White, Health and P.E. teacher, agreed with this statement. He said, "In my opinion, it is the most important subject that you will need later in life." The skills learned such as stretches, nutrition, and body maintenance help shape the lives of students both for today and their futures in Health and P.E

Left: Senior Elizabeth Golinsk attempts the high jump. The high jump was one of the activities offered at Battlefield High School. The high jump is a great source of exercise because it helps build leg muscle.

Above: P.E. students are all watching and participating in the long jump. Long jump was an activity that was not only available in P.E. but also in Track and Field.

Below: Freshman Hailey Artz is working on classwork for Health class. Health was an important subject because it taught students how to live a healthy life.

Right: Junior Alyssa Fletcher practices taking photographs in front of the green screen, using sophomores Torii Clark, Hayley Bumgardner, Julie Craft, Kevin Ro, and Jonathan Esteban as her models. The iT students loved working with the green screen and said that it was a lot of fun, especially when they got to develop them after. Junior Torii Clark shared, "I like developing pictures because a lot of people don't know how to."

iTIsAllOrNothing

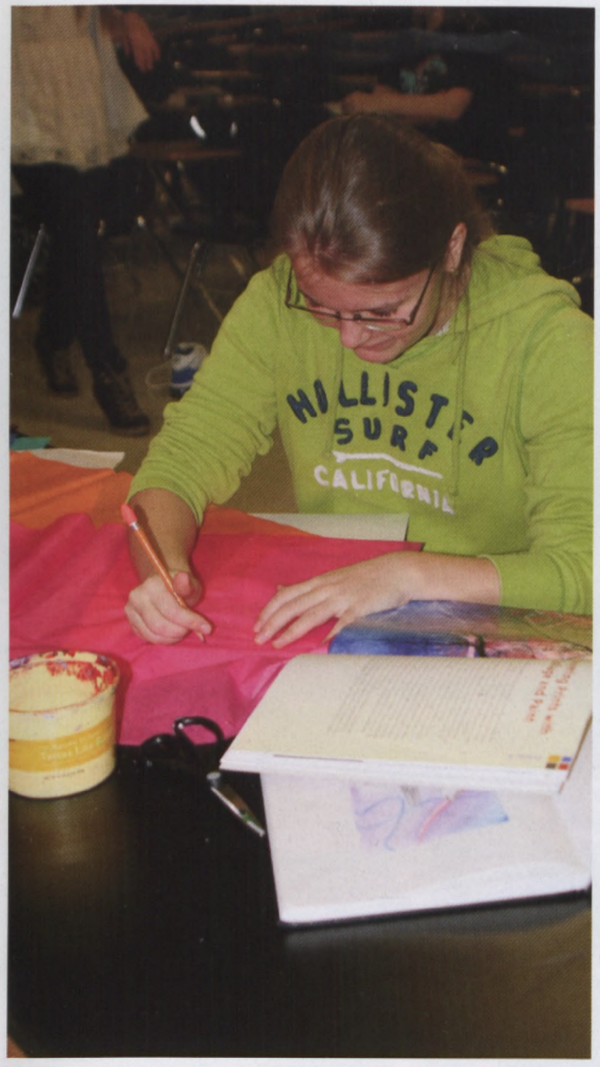

iT Interactive Media

The students of the iT Interactive Media program worked hard this year to create special artwork that meant something to them. In Mrs. Goetz's iT Photography class, students learned how to take exquisite photographs and develop them in the darkroom. They worked hard to get good results. Working together in the iT program has also brought the students much closer together. Junior Jonathan Esteban shared, "I love being in there with sixteen girls and Kevin Bro. It's very enjoyable." iT Multimedia also proved to be a very beneficial academic class for students. Junior Julie Craft said that she took the class to learn how to make web pages and use different Adobe softwares. Being familiar with computer and design software is beyond helpful in most lines of work. "I took this class for college because it looks good. I thought it'd be really interesting to experience," said junior Hayley Bumgardner.

~Hayley Hutson

Above: Junior Jonathan Esteban focusing on researching tips on how to properly clean his film. Cleaning film was a very important part of photography. "Cleaning the film is hard work, but I'm definitely glad I know how to do it," Esteban said on the subject.

Left: Sophomore Victoria Kovalchuk works on creating the background for the portrait photoshop project. Students spent a lot of time preparing elements for their projects that were not obvious in the final product. These projects let kids express themselves through their art. Victoria said that "Computer Graphics really lets people express themselves. "

Below: Sophomores Justus Harris, Daniel Garcia and Sabrina Poland are focusing on researching inspiration for their project. Sabrina said that "It is a great creative experience," to be in iT Computer Graphics I. Daniel stated that it was "the best class I have ever taken."

Above: Sophomores Kaden Ring, Bryanna Young, and senior Ray Karns are reviewing the photo they took of Ray on the green screen. Students had to take multiple pictures before they found the one that would work perfectly. Many of those practice shots created amusement and entertainment for those involved.

Sophomores Lauren Pierson, Chelsea Kina, and Sarah Swinsky discuss visions for their green screen project in iT Computer Graphics I. The objective was to take pictures of people in front of a green screen and then replace the green screen with a background of their choice. The girls worked well together and learned more about Photoshop from one another. Their hard work paid off and resulted in an A for the project.

Technology Takeover
Robotics

"Inspiring leaders in technology and engineering" was the motto and name of iLite Robotics program at Battlefield High School. The program consisted of multiple classes during school, and countless hours spent after school and on weekends. The robotics teams were successful and pushed the limits on basic robot building. As an IT school, Battlefield supported robotics through the various courses it offered. For example, the programming classes were extremely advantageous for students within the robotics program. Students found ways to inspire and motivate themselves during long hours of programming and building. Sophomore Gabrielle Reilly said, "My teacher Professor Drake and teammates inspire me." When working on a robot it was important to work together so all the teammates could collaborate with each other and find solutions through innovation in order to develop a winning finished robot.

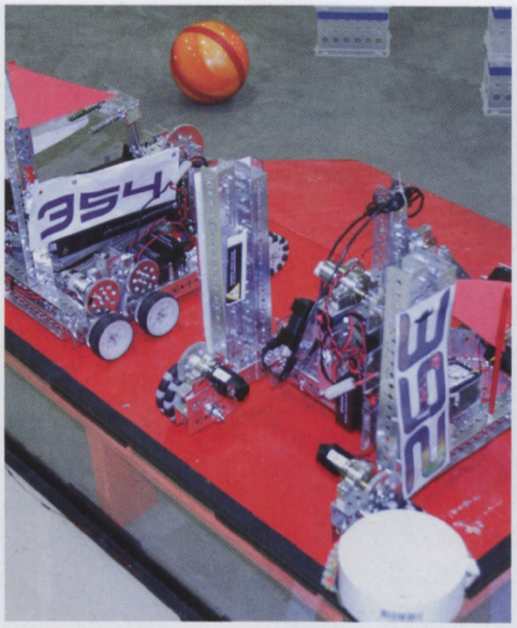

This class was unique in itself, because all of the students who took it were very passionate about designing, building and programming robots. Sophomore Deshaun Ormond said, "My favorite aspect in this program is the bonding with my fellow class mates, it is really fun and uplifting." Two robotics teams went on to compete in Worlds. During the seven years that Battlefield has the robotics program, they had presence at Worlds each year.

Above: Junior Jonathan Larios and Sophomore Grace Kim work diligently on a stable piece for the foundation of the robot. Without the foundation, the robot would not be able to preform. Sophomore Bryan Quach said "This class is extremely challenging but I've grown to love it."
Left: The robots are on display waiting to preform. The robots were very intricate, and required a large amount of time and reworking to complete. The minimum amount of time it took to build a robot was the at least a month, and even longer to program, making building and programming a robot "no walk in the park."

Left: Sophomore Skylar Edwards is setting up the arena for the upcoming trial of their robot. These test runs were crucial to fixing any kinks that the robot may have had. This was one of the many long processes necessary to ensure that the robot preformed well during competition.

Left: Sophomores Nikolaus Barnhill, Andrey Choi, and Ocean Manlapaz working hard to complete their technical design for their robot. This was critical detail that needed to be completed for their competition. Students used programming, designing, brainstorming and team work, in addition to team work into the completion of their robot.

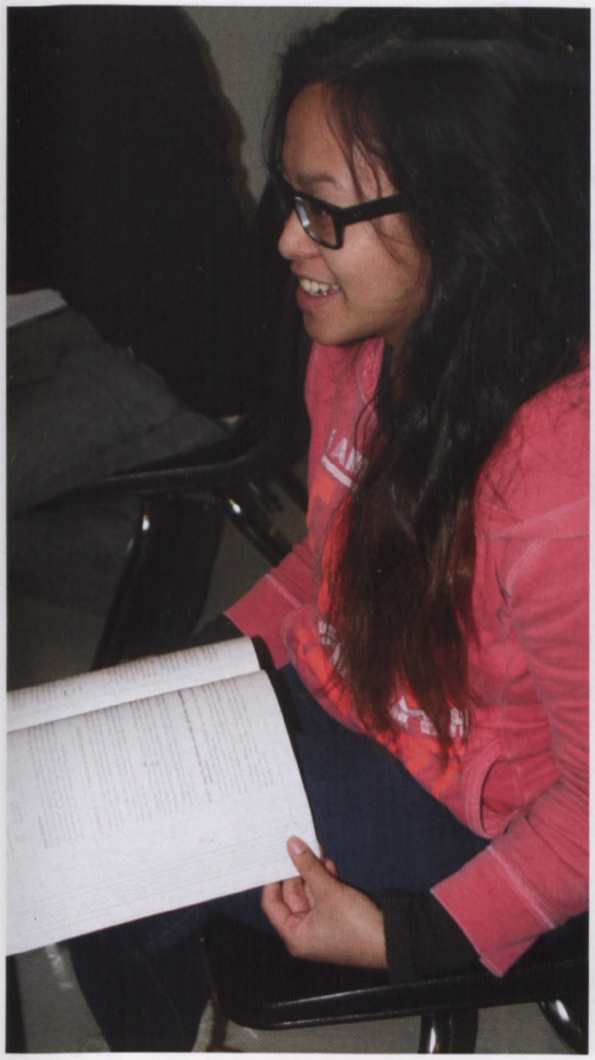

Right: Working on computers in the IT Programming Class, which is part of the Programming Track, seniors Jakob Kressel and Cary Reese, students complete assignments in the book. The assignment included designing object oriented pseudopod. Cary said that "IT programming teaches us probably the most important concepts about programming we need to know for the rest of our lives."

CreatingANewFuture

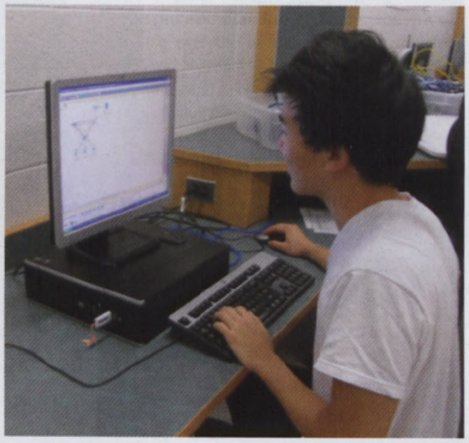

Bobcat IT Specialty Center

The Information Technology, or IT Program is a special program offered at Battlefield High School. It was divided into Cisco Networking, Engineering/Robotics, Advanced Web Technologies, IT Programming, and Database Design. Four of the five courses offered the opportunity of dual enrollment, giving students credit in both high school and college. These fully weighted classes helped prepare students for the future. "Database Design is a challenging class, but allows room for the student to learn the concept and view the world differently when looking into databases," said senior Jordan Soriano. In Cisco Networking, students set up networks and worked on computers and cables. "Cisco started out challenging because it was all new. This year it was challenging because you take that knowledge and apply it to real situations," said senior Tony Shin. In Advanced Web Technologies, students built websites and used new technologies, while students worked with programming in IT Programming. "I love how you can take lines of code and turn them into an interactive site," said junior Daniel Lopez. When asked what she enjoyed about the IT Program, junior Kelsey McKenna said, "Working hands on the machine." The courses in the Information Technology Program were a rewarding experience for those who wanted to learn skills that are in demand in the growing IT industry. ~Gene Lee

Left: Senior Joanna Senseng programing in her Challenges in Engineering Class, which is part of the Engineering Track. These classes required a lot of independent work, where students finished assignments and assessments at their own pace. This was a very realistic way of preparing for the real world.

Left: Focused on his work, senior Eric Yoo working on a computer program. He worked on the Packet Tracer program on the computer in Ms. Evers' class. "Using the Packet Tracer program is like using equipment but you don't have to remember where the cords plug in," he said.

Below: Juniors Nick Newman, William Lahann, and Brian Potts working with seniors Tim Lee and Damien Lee designing a non-profit website in XHTML 5.0. Students worked together often on various projects throughout the year. Being able to demonstrate teamwork and collaboration was an important element of the class.

Left: While programming together in their Advanced Web Technologies Class, which is part of the Programming Track, seniors Joshua Hollingsworth and Eric Yoo discuss which way to debug a problem in their program. Assignments in Advanced Web Technologies Class involved both innovation as well as problem solving. Students planned on using their programming skills both in college and hopefully in their future jobs.

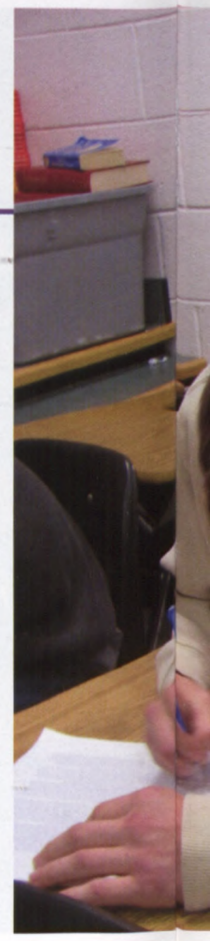

Left: Setting up a computer system, seniors Michael Tolliver, Stephen Polo, and Joel Kaminski (right to left) working on cables. The students liked working on projects with routers and cables. "I enjoy how I've advanced my skills and organization through the IT Program," said Joel.

English

Right: Jacob Rose, sophomore said, "I want to be a writer or a poet when I grow up. My English class gives me more knowledge I'll be able to use, and I love learning new vocabulary." English gave many students like Jacob skills needed for everyday life.

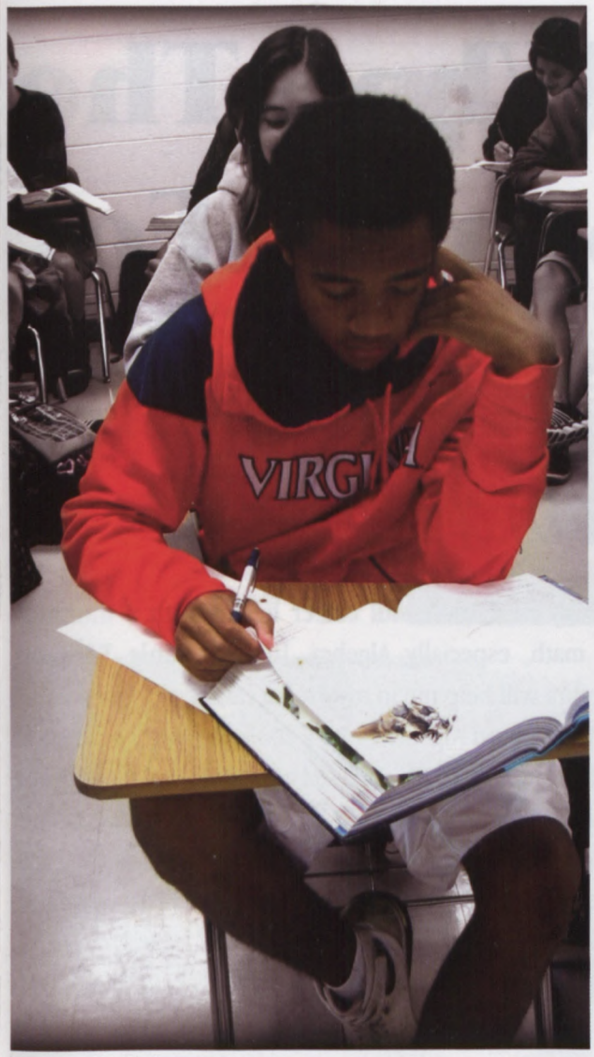

Building Blocks for Life

Walk down Second Street and turn right onto Antioch Drive. There, students will find themselves in the English hallway, a haven for students of any grade. As said by Mrs. Johnson, a tenth grade English teacher, "English is important for all communication. We need a good basis from the past, through the present, and into the future to keep our communication throughout the years. That is why English is so important." No matter what grade level, English does not just last from the day after Labor Day to the second week of June; it is something that students take with them for years to come.

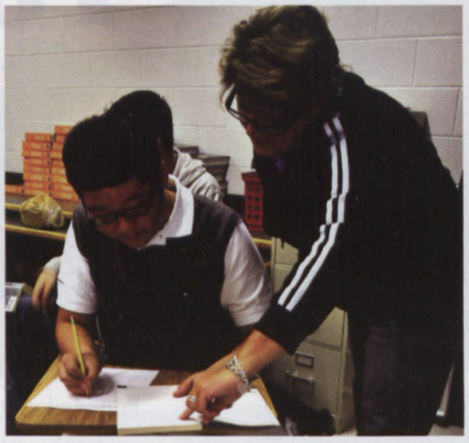

English students loved their classes because it was a place where they could be creative, but learn at the same time. Whether they were reading a piece of literature to discuss with classmates, analyzing the syntax, or writing something themselves, throughout the years students were either creating, or learning to create. English was special because it allowed room for free thought, and it was something so fundamental, it got students thinking about their futures as well.

Below: Mrs. Johnson explains a piece of "Pay It Forward" to sophomore Kyle So. Sophomores like Kyle focused most of the year on reading different pieces of literature like poetry, speeches and separate literature genres to understand written expression. They also practiced their own written expression

And the Winner is... MRS. EDWARDS!

Mrs. Edwards, tenth and eleventh grade English teacher, was a favorite to all students because of her unique approach to teaching. Junior Ricky Aguilar said, "She treats us like adults. Being in our junior year, we'll be going to college soon. Mrs. Edwards prepared us for that by not "babying" us." Mrs. Edwards explained things in a way that students really understood. They loved her funny and sarcastic personality and the personal connection she had with each of the them. She is a teacher who gets things done and never gave busy work. "She's inspirational; everyday she has a smile on her face," said junior Ayisha Minter. While junior Kayla Townsend would say she is "the most chill teacher at Battlefield," more than one of her students in her first period class said, "She's just awesome!"

WhatsThe FormulaFor TheFuture?

Algebra

Right: Freshman Brittany Hudson shows her board to her Algebra teacher in response to the problem on the smartboard that needed to be solved. She got the answer correct. Learning how to do basic algebra is important, because it is the basic building blocks for future concepts.

Below: Freshman Jon Jacobs works quickly to solve the equation during one of Mr. Alouise's review game. Jon worked carefully to make sure his work and his answer were correct. Review games were fun for the students and ensure that they knew the material thoroughly.

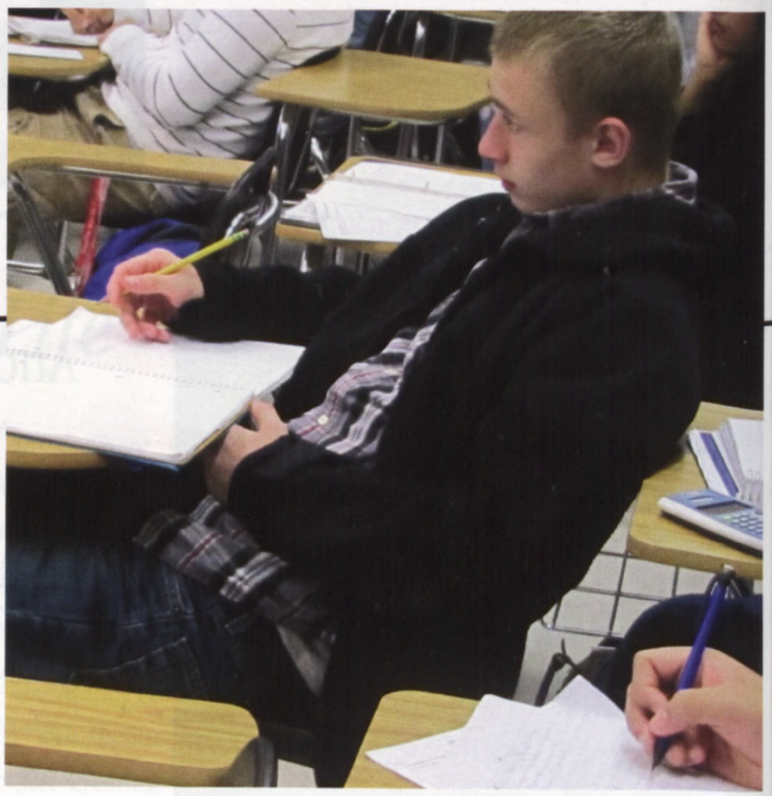

The gateway to a successful career begins with a thorough knowledge of math, especially Algebra. Junior Lonnie Williams stated that "Algebra will help me in my dream career as a video game designer." Students found Algebra to be a class that they could excel in. Freshman Kendra Anderson said, " My favorite part about being in Algebra is getting As on the tests." Algebra also helped students succeed in other core subjects. Freshman Alexis Pope said, "It has helped me better understand science because of all algebraic equations that are often seen in science classes." Algebra was an important class that benefited students in many new beginnings.

Geometry

Right: Senior Wade Potter learns how to find the domain of a graph from an equation. Throughout the course of the year, Wade mastered the art of graphing. Finding the domain is an important part of many algebraic functions.

Geometry was a class that gave students a new angle on life. "I use geometry in science and the logic used in Geometry has helped in English class too," said freshman Caroline Mohan. While Geometry was about academics, students also got to meet new people who had the same interests as they did. Freshman Kimberly Logan stated, "My favorite part of Geometry is learning at an advanced level, and meeting new and older students." Students loved to excel in Geometry class this year. Sophomore Elizabeth Gallian said, "My favorite part about being in Geometry is being able to use formulas to make everything fit together." Geometry allowed students to learn math in a fun interactive environment. Students will carry the lessons that they learned in Geometry with them for the rest of their lives.

-Emanuel Castaneda

Right: Junior Sarah Choi takes careful notes during Mr. King's lecture on parabolas. Sarah made sure her notes were detailed and organized in order to help her solve math problems. "Taking notes is really important." confirmed Sarah.

InFocus

AP Calculus

In Mr. Wolf's AP Calculus class, it seemed that he was favored more than the subject! But for one student it could go either way. Senior Erin Seagears said "I like the teacher and the class is not difficult." She also said that "the math that they are learning is important if you want to go into a certain field of math." This showed that Erin was thinking about ways to use Calculus in the future. Most people thought that the class is fun, but it is the teacher who makes the class worth learning. "Math would be important if I wanted to go into engineering and that's one of the classes I would need" says senior John Nunez. Calculus is only the end of their senior year in high school, so what they do next is only the beginning.

~ Nikki Melendez, Dejaquan Agnew and Tiffany Wyman

Above: Junior John Agnos was having a conversation with his fellow students about Calculus. Senior John Nuez said he liked the class, but the not the subject. They seem to be good friends because they helped each other in class, and got along well while being interviewed!

Above: Junior Charlie Husser and seniors Jake Maltbie and Matt Moser study for a vocabulary quiz Quizzes help teachers see what students know so far. Matt stated that Calculus helped because, "The work load prepares you for a college class."

Right: Senior Heather Hagood taking her quiz. The quiz was based on Calculus vocabulary words. In order to do well in Calculus, students had to understand and know the terms.

Right: Senior Brianna Ellison practices her math skills on the smart board. Sometimes seeing someone else work out a problem helped the class better understand the concepts. Visual learners learned best this way, and teachers tried to make opportunities for all types of learners available.

Below: Juniors Blaine Varley and Kaitlyn Arnold take notes as their teacher introduces them to a new lesson. At times, it was important to work in groups. This way, students had a better understanding on what was being taught.

AddingUp TheFuture

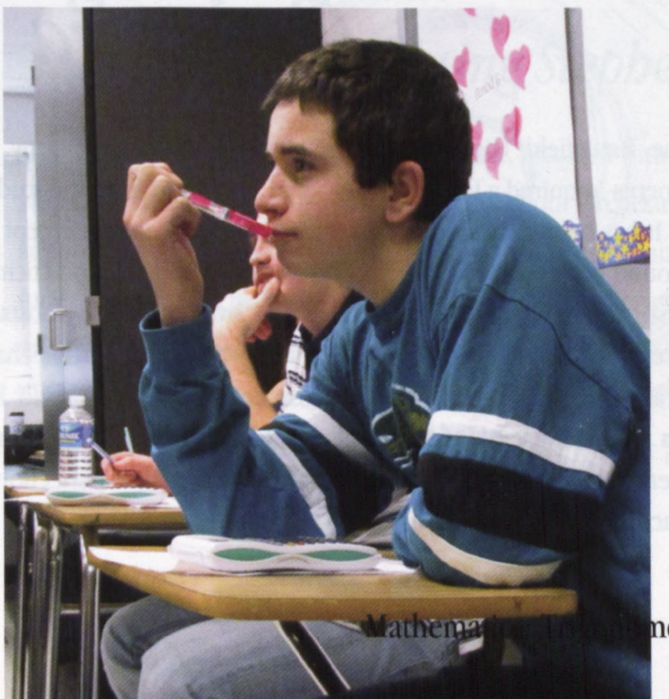

Trigonometry

Trigonometry was said to be one of the more challenging courses at Battlefield High School. Trigonometry deals with the relations of the sides and angles of triangles. Since it was a weighted class, it took hard work and dedication. Junior Taylor Trace said "it is a difficult class but with studying and hard work anything is possible." Even though Trigonometry was a challenging course, the teachers were very dedicated to helping their students succeed. Most teachers took their spare time to give their students extra help by staying after or coming in early in the morning. Junior Tyler Beans gave advice to future students, "All you need to know about Trig is Mrs. Weber, she is the best." Trigonometry might have been a tough class, but Battlefield was always on top academically.

~Tori Kushner

Trigonometry teacher Mrs. DeLaet carefully grades papers during her planning period. Teachers were consistently dedicated to helping out their students. This was generally reflected in the grades their students received.

Left: Junior Tyler Beans is deep in thought, trying to figure out how to solve a difficult equation. Taking notes and practicing solving problems was very important to success in Trigonometry. As is often said, practice makes perfect.

Right: One of the higher ensembles performing at the winter concert. At the beginning of their first song, they did not need their director which showed the audience their ability to work together without their director on stage. Their hard work and dedication showed the audience and their director what they could achieve.

Orchestra

The Battlefield High School Orchestra accomplished many goals throughout the school year. Reaching these achievements required a lot of practice, time, and effort from the students in the Orchestra. Senior Creighton Incorminias stated, " It has helped me become a better player. Learning to accept my mistakes through practice has helped me become an all around better player." Senior Andrew Jung said, " By practicing I was able to perfect my ability." Many students felt they personally have made achievements and overcome many obstacles through this year. Sophomore Toni Mancinelli said, " Learning the advanced music in a short amount of time has definitely been the hardest thing to overcome in Orchestra." Orchestra students felt their teacher, Ms. Thiele, really helped them both as a whole and individually. Senior Carolina Santillian stated, " Ms. Thiele has taught a lot of us about music and about life. Even though she is kind of strict, she's a very wonderful teacher. By being strict she demands perfection and helped us to be the best." The orchestra worked hard to achieve their goals all year long.

~Cameron McPhail & Gianna Mollica

Left: Sophomore Grace Kim practicing her instrument while preparing for the winter concert. Even though practicing took a lot of time, she found time in her busy schedule to practice. Playing an Instrument required a lot of dedication.

The Fundraising Coordinator Stephen Fink, pictured with senior Geo Fuentes, worked very hard with the Battlefield High School Orchestra to raise money and support the orchestra with everything they need. He organized and managed any fundraising the Orchestra did and said, " I enjoy this role very much because it's a great way to give back." Stephen loved orchestra and all of its rewards. He said, " I do hope to continue orchestra. It's a great stress reliever." Orchestra not only helped him with school it also helped him become a better person.

Earth Science

Right: Freshman Darrion Herdon works hard on getting his Earth Science class work finished. Darrion had no problem completing his work, because he enjoyed the class as a whole.
Below: Freshmen Nicole Salinas, Nhu Ngwyen, Brooke Toelle, and Sophomore Katherine Searcy assist Mrs. Thumser with both a fun and delicious lab activity. "Keeping the attention of students at times may be challenging, but I have come to discover relating food to the curriculum interests all students," said Mrs. Thumser.

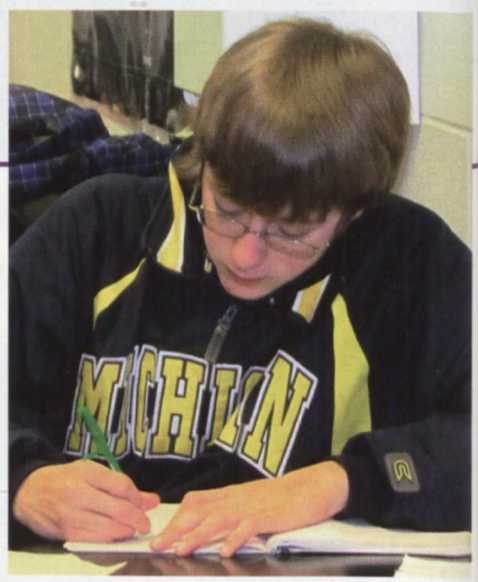

Why does the weather change? How did the seven continents form? What formed the Grand Canyon? What makes an earthquake? These are questions that can only be answered in one class, Earth Science. As freshman Donna Darling said, "If I want to become a weather person, I will already have some knowledge on why Earth's climate is how it is, because I am taking Earth Science." Although science may not be the most exciting subject, "If you have a good teacher who knows how to keep you interested it can be really fun" said freshman Jinar Logan. Earth Science is not just a class that is taken because it is required, it is a class that it taken because students want to expand their knowledge on the planet they call home. Not only does the class benefit those who desire a career in any science field, but also benefits in other classes. Freshman Preston Mapp said, "Because we learn about the structures of mountains and their climates, it helps me in history when we study geography." Even though students do not mix chemicals, make explosions, or light things on fire, learning about some of Earth's many qualities that make it unique to other planets, and making new friends, is always a good time.

~Imani Key

Above: Freshmen Jinar Logan and Luke Joslin use team work to get their class work completed. "Team work is the best way to get work completed fast," said the boys. By working together they definitely got the work done with enough time to socialize with some fellow classmates.

Above: Freshmen Matt Shellberg uses full focus to get his classwork finished. He worked hard so he could enjoy some of the popcorn the rest of his class popped for their lab. Matt said, "Hard work and dedication is the only way I can get my work done, and learning new things is fun."

Biology

Right: Sophomore Anna Metrinko is studying her vocabulary for her upcoming Biology quiz. The students took vocabulary quizzes to stay sharp on their knowledge of the terms that are used daily in the class. In Biology, vocabulary was essential to understanding exactly what was going on the the class; without it, nothing would make sense.

In Biology, students dissect animals and learn about organisms. Battlefield High School offers Biology 1, Biology 2, and AP Biology. Freshman Alexandra-Kelly Dacey said, "My favorite part about Biology is doing hands on activities!" In Biology, students conducted many hands-on activities throughout the year, including labs and dissections. Students also learned about animals inside and out... quite literally! Plant and animal cells were studied thoroughly and students gained a better understanding of why plants and animals are vital to everyone. Sophomore Tori Raisor said, "Studying cells and how they work are my favorite!" Likewise, sophomore Jaren Gregory stated that some of the videos they watch helped with his understanding, "I like watching predator vs. prey videos, they help me learn how life in the wild really is." Biology is the science where every living thing can be understood.

~Brandon Attiliis

Above: Freshmen Matt Tschida and Alexis Champion work together to complete a matching activity. The students used matching activities to help learn cell parts and animal kingdoms. Matt said, "This way of reviewing really helps me score a good grade!"

Above: Freshmen Cassandra Bissett and Lillian Diamond work together as lab partners on a group project. Cassandra and Lillian demonstrated team work, and helped each other to fully understand what was going on, as they said, "two brains is better than one." In Biology it is vital to help each other advance.

Chemistry & Forensics

Right: After receiving back a recent test, sophomore Nicole Huebner looks over her answers and results. Students were strongly encouraged to note the corrections. Huebner, like her classmates, recognized the importance of reviewing test materials in order to know the concepts and be successful in this building-block subject.

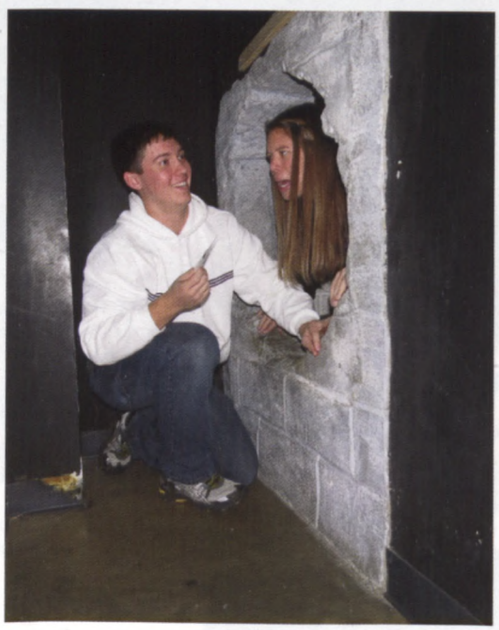

Below: Following standard safety procedure by wearing goggles, senior Rachel Given prepares to measure the mass of a beaker of hydrated cupric sulfate. The class did the experiment to study the basics of chemical compounds. Understanding chemical bonds and nomenclature was a foundational part of progressing in the course.

Above: While he collaborates with sophomore Grace Kim, junior Aaron Kim takes a break from reviewing notes to make a face at the camera. Chemistry was hard work, but they found ways to enjoy themselves! The students knew that careful focus was a key to learning chemistry, but they also knew that a good attitude was vital to making even the toughest units bearable.

Right: On a Forensics field trip, seniors Lucas Klugh and Megan Kriss go exploring at the National Museum of Crime and Punishment in Washington, D.C. The hole they crawled through was found in a room designed to look like a prison cell. This room gave the students a peek into the living conditions that some prisoners have experienced.

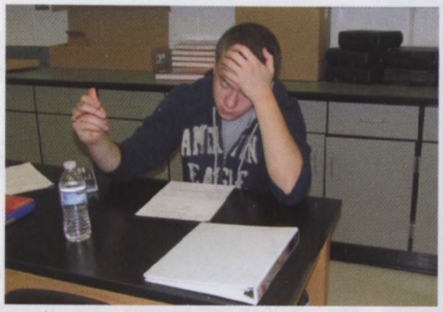

It was a challenge that everyone had to face, a widely dreaded class reputed to be rigorous and quite difficult for many students. The comprehension, memorization, and application of numerous new concepts were vital to this formal study of matter, a course known as Chemistry. It was easy to fall behind, but success was not out of reach. Obstacles could be overcome. As junior Jason Huynh said, "Prepare to be challenged." The end of a successful year in Chemistry would welcome the beginning of new insights into the realms of science. Despite its gloomy reputation, Chemistry did not have to be a burden; students found plenty to enjoy about it. "My favorite part was participating in the science fair," sophomore Morgan Albertson said. Sophomore Ryan Ward insisted, "My favorite part about chemistry is the labs; they are interesting." Junior Kinsey Kirchmyer added, "The food experiments are fun!" Laboratory experiments were an imperative addition to the classroom environment. They allowed students to tangibly apply the topics about which they had learned, whether about chemical compositions, reactions, or other related concepts.

Chemistry II, or Forensics, a college preparatory course that introduced the usage of scientific data to analyze evidence from crime scenes, provided a prime example of chemistry's application in the "real world." Is it like what is seen on television shows such as CSI or NCIS? Junior Miranda Stevens said, "Not really. It's not about how the detectives find evidence. It's more about what the scientists can gather from the evidence." Senior Paige Moore added, "It has to do with finding scientific data that can be used in a court of law."

Naturally, it was easiest for students to appreciate a subject when they had the certainty that this knowledge would prove to be useful in the future. Sophomore Taylor Franklin understood this. "I want to be a doctor," she said. "Chemistry will further my understanding of concepts in the medical field." She recognized that the class would lay a solid foundation for what she hoped to pursue as a career. It would open the door to the beginning of a bright and successful future.

Physics

Right: Senior Christopher Seise thinking intently to figure out one of his many Physics problems. In Physics students learned to understand the world around them. Physics challenges the mind with many theories and concepts.
Below: Physics students participating in an elevator lab. Students rode the elevator up and down to calculate their change in weight. This lab was an excellent way to show change in gravity.

Bobcats worked hard in Physics throughout the year, performing numerous experiments. Students used math skills learned in previous years to solve real world problems. Although it was not a favorite of most students, senior Korkor Koppoe said, "There are a lot of fun labs, which make learning the material easier!" From acceleration to terminal velocity, students learned it all. Senior Fatima Molina said, "Physics teaches you stronger math skills in science." In Physics, among many other things, students learned life skills through group activities, and saw the effects of force and gravity on their bodies and objects. Physics not only helped students in the present, but it also helped prepare the for the future.

~Caitlyn Moore

Above: Senior Carrie Bass using her calculator to determine if her results were accurate. Physics students often used calculators to calculate gravitational force, resonant frequency and convert mass to energy along with many other things. Calculators were important to success in Physics.

Above: Seniors Kati Richardson and Katelyn McGlothlin work hard to complete their labs. After riding the elevator multiple times up and down, they found the necessary calculations. With the worksheet, they further explained their results and explained the pros and cons of the lab.

Left: Seniors Ryan Asper and Ivey McRory work on a net forces worksheet. Understanding forces also helped students understand the world around them. Ryan said, "Physics is fulfilling because it gives me valuable life lessons."

World History

Right: Sophomore Andrew Bryant thinking about how World History influenced his life. He reflected that "It will help me understand the things I see and hear." A world without history would be nothing.

Bottom: World History students doing assigned book work. In order to understand what happened in history, teachers have them do book work to understand more about what occurred and how it came to be. Everything has a purpose in time, no matter how big or little the event was.

The past has led to the future. Mr. Cruz, Mr. Coughlin, and Mr. Miller all taught the World History classes to teach students about the world's history, and the events that led up to the society of today. As the famous author H.G. Wells said, "Human history becomes more and more a race between education and catastrophe." By studying history, students were able to understand past mistakes and how to avoid them in the future. Students found the classes interesting, "The teacher is really awesome!" said sophomore Thien Dao. All freshmen and sophomores had to take World History classes. The class encouraged students to learn about what the world was before technology and modernization changed it. "History is about our past, what our ancestors have done, and how our country is today," stated sophomore Nick Feight. Most students in the class enjoyed the way the teachers taught them, it is "a class where I take notes and sit, but the teacher is really chill!" exclaimed sophomore Vincent Procter. President George Washington once reflected that, "We should not look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors, and for the purpose of profiting by dearly bought experience." Understanding history helps the next generation look upon the future with a bright outlook. The past are memories, the present is a gift, and the future is yet to be lived. The events from yesterday made possible the reality of today.

Sociology

Right: Senior Hannah Shawter figuring out what to do in her Sociology assignment. Sociology studies the many different cultures and human habits. Numerous students who took the class became more aware about other students tendencies.
Below: Senior Lucas Kwak works on a writing assignment. The study of Sociology included all forms of communication, both verbal and written. Essay writing helped the student express the various theories they studied.

Right: Senior Evan Roseberry takes notes on a lecture given by Ms. Miles. Sociology is the origin of development in human society. By learning about social interactions and traditions, students learned to better understand history, and their own interactions.

Ms. Miles described Sociology as "the study of people, their relationships, and society. Sociologists attempt to understand and explain human social behavior by studying the groups to which they belong. This course has introduced students to various sociological issues, such as those concerning religion, the family, crime, social class, gender, age, and race." Students also focused on developing skills that allowed more effective participation in contemporary society, by examining issues and seeking solutions to problems involving the interactions of people. Because the majority of this information applies to everyone's lives, much of the course was geared towards class discussions, primary and secondary sources, observations, and field study. Senior Marissa Galvan said, "Sociology teaches me all of the different ways people interact with each other. I like learning how it shows us certain ways we do stuff and the way we react a certain way!" Because students act in a variety of manners, senior Brandon McIntosh said, "It has taught me that people act in different ways based on who they grew up with, and their surroundings." The students learned that those they hung out with affected the way they acted!

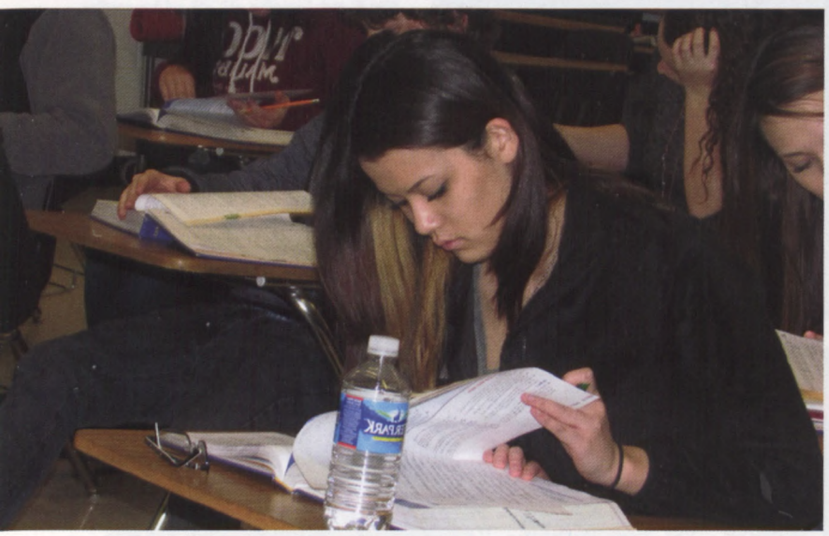

~Nicky Melendez

Left: Senior Alexandra Falk works in her Sociology journal. Notebook work helped many students in the class organize and remember what they have learned. It was important to take notes in Sociology in order to remember many of the different trends in inter-social behaviors.

ItIsJustTheBeginning, ThereIsMoreHistory ToCome

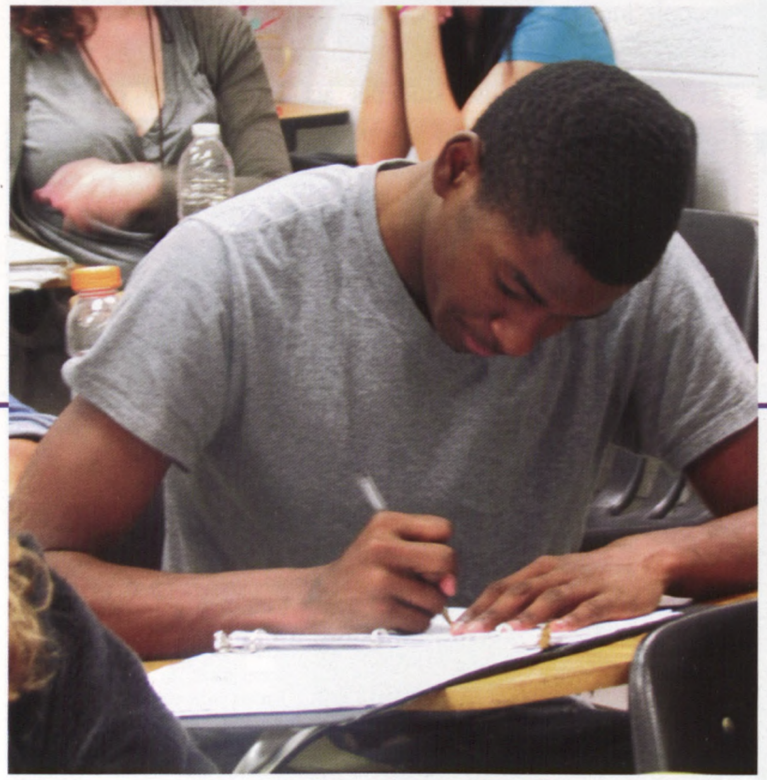

History

Senior Chanel Gagne works intently on a textbook assignment in Government. She was preparing for college, and knew that not only was a good grade important, but that her History class would prepare her for college as well. Many History classes were set up like college courses, with lectures and essays and were vital in preparing students for their future colleges.

History is an important subject to learn, because people need to understand the past in order to create a better future. For instance, junior Hanna Radhi said "I want to be a History teacher so I can help others know the history of Virginia, and history in general!" Students enjoyed coming to class to learn about things that have to do with where they live. Junior Dante Richardson said "I love learning about our world's past; its so interesting." Senior Mike Fulton showed that it kept him informed "we talk about recent news, and funny news that happened around our area, so we always stay informed with whats happening." Senior Hazel Condori said, "I think that Government is important, because it helps you understand more about how the whole government system really works, and prepares you for when you deal with important issues like taxes, voting, and political parties." Different types of History lessons are needed in life, to show where the world started, how far people have come, and how far they still need to go. It is just the beginning of our history.

~Jade Davila

Above: Junior Roman Hall concentrates on taking good notes. He said that History was one of his more challenging classes, so he tried to stay as focused as possible. All juniors had to take US/VA History which lead nicely into government for their senior year.

Psychology

Right: Students from Mr. Rohrbach's first period class, working hard on discovering the human mind. As they got ready for their test and essay they interpreted their dreams into their work. Students in psychology were inspired to learn on how the human brain works.

Below: Mr. Rohrbach's class reviewing a little about the human mind right before writing an essay. Class time was split between lectures, reading and writing. Writing prompts helped students prepare for exams.

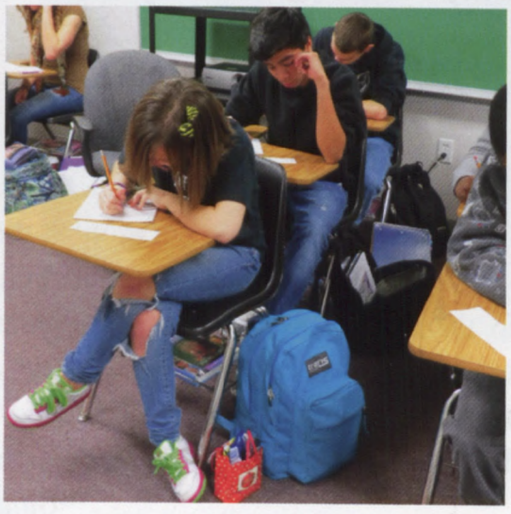

Psychology is the spring of understanding. Students learned how the human mind works and studies the mind in different cultures. Junior Jennifer Breedlove stated, "I like learning about why we think and act the way we do." Some students in this class hoped to pursue a career in the different fields of psychology in the future. Many students decided to take psychology because they wanted to try something new, and wanted a challenge themselves. Junior Tapi Mbundure commented, "I enjoy learning about how humans work and why we do the things we do. Also, Ms. Munchel is an awesome teacher!" Students in this class take the time to learn the general build of the human mind. They recognized the structure of human psychology and learned that it is not easy to rebuild it. The world of psychology contains thoughts, moods, attitudes, and feelings. It is the world of dark and light, of noise and silence, of rough and smooth. Its space is sometimes large and sometimes small; it is time is sometimes short and sometimes long, it has no invariables. Psychology contains all the thoughts, emotions, memories, imaginations, and volitions that are naturally ascribe to mind. To know psychology ... is no guarantee that humans shall manage their minds correctly.

Technology Education

Paving the Way to the Future, Step by Step

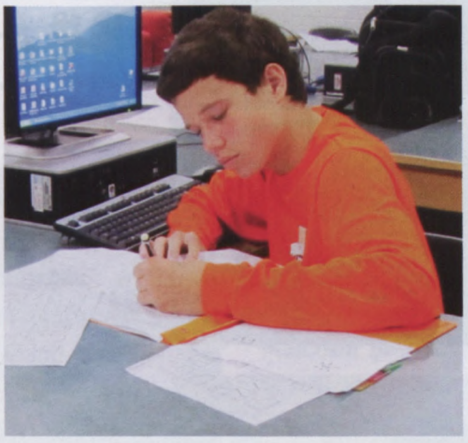

Building the way to the future. "This class is the road to my engineering career," said sophomore Matt O' Brien. Technology education is the spark for a wide variety of opportunities for people interested in architecture and engineering. It sets a foundation for future classes in the technology education field. Junior Eric Jordan said "We are building for the future." High school is the stepping stone to creating more prospects. The world feeds off ideas and flourishes from them. Technology Education was not the end for students, but only the beginning of a sunny road leading them to a bright future future.

German

Right: Sophomore Colby Riley answer a question off a worksheet. He was excited to learn German in this high energy classroom. "I've learned almost half the language just by being here."

Below: Senior Ryan Mast and sophomore Joshua Custer listen to a German recording while following along. Students listened to fluent speakers in order to become better acquainted with the language. When asked about the future use for his German skills, Ryan said, "If I ever visit Germany I'll be able to have a basic understanding of the language."

Learning a new language is never easy, but German Class was rewarding and taught skills which improved the future of students. Being fluent in a foreign language can open doors to many job opportunities. Many students used this class to prepare for a future with the German language. "I'm planning on moving to Germany once I'm older, to play for a soccer team over there," said freshman Matin Azin.

During class they listened to tapes and read aloud from books to listen and learn how to pronounce words, and to help with memorizing. German Class was full of students eager to learn the language and culture. "Some of the fun things we've learned are how to say Merry Christmas and [German] traditions which are similar to ours. That's fun to me," said freshman Garrison Setness.

German Class helped students succeed in opening up their minds about different cultures. "I found it easier to learn French, but I'm getting the hang of it," commented freshman Talia Winstead, when asked how her French and German class differed. Taking more than one language might sound intimidating, but it was a great way to learn about what life is like for other people around the world. German took that and made it interesting by helping students interact with the language.

~Melian Miller

Above: Freshman Eve Mathews is speaking up in class and reciting from memory. She spoke of how she will use the German language in every day life, "Hopefully in the future I'll travel to Europe. I would love to go to Germany and communicate with the people."

Left: Junior Kevin Case is listening to his classmates recite out of the textbook. Listening to how other people speak the language could be beneficial to students trying to memorize and learn a world language. "German is different compared to a class like Spanish, where it's similar to English," said Kevin.

WithoutIt,TheWorld WouldBeBlind Latin

Right: Freshman Brooke Alberston gives her full attention to nueter nouns. Nueter nouns are neither feminine nor masculine. Students worked hard to learn these nouns which helped them with the context of their writing.

Although Latin is considered a "dead language," as it went down with the Roman Empire, it is still taught today. Modern languages create words using Latin to this day. "It is a lot more fascinating than Spanish and French," says senior Malcolm Smith. Students chose to learn Latin for a variety of reasons, senior Michelle Kim stated that "Latin gives you an insight on the origination of our own and other languages." Without Latin it would be very difficult to precisely define scientific terms. Senior Taylor Curran said, "Latin is a great way to get ahead in science and on the SAT. It has helped immensely in all of my classes." In Latin, it can sometimes take a week or two to translate a single sentence. However, the effort pays off as those who excel in Latin excel in all other aspects of life! ~Ahmed Kaptan

Above: A poster hangs in the Latin classroom. "Carpe Diem" means "seize the day," as to live everyday to the fullest. Because the poster hangs at the front of the room, students are reminded of this every time they walk into class, ready to learn and seize their future.

Above: Freshman Jonathan Sovereign works diligently on his vocabulary. Latin vocabulary is useful in many other classes, including Biology. Many students enrolled in Latin also take other romance languages such as French and Spanish.

Anyone observing Ms.Yount could see why she was nominated for the Agnes Meyers award in Prince William County. She presented information in a variety of techniques to help all of her students fully understand Latin. Ms.Yount reflected, "I balance high standards with compassion so all my students can learn at the same level." After her 15 years in the teaching industry, it is surprising that this is only her first nomination.

¡Hola! Spanish

Right: Junior Kelsey Goodwin is enjoying her Spanish class. She was writing a ten sentence paragraph about her life in Spanish with the help of her Spanish/English dictionary. "I enjoy my class because I love to learn the different things about the Spanish culture," said Kelsey.

Below: Sophomores Dakota Garcia and Karli Campbell practice their Spanish speaking during Miss Kastrup's Spanish II class. The girls worked on their assignment and then spoke what they had written out loud. Oral presentations are one way students were challenged to learn in Spanish classes.

Spanish is a well known language that many people have learned, or would like to learn. The culture of this language has been quickly spreading around the United States, making Spanish the language to learn. Many students wanted to see what Spanish had to offer, which is why it was such a popular subject at Battlefield High School. It was difficult to learn and many people wanted to conquer the language, especially in high school. "It is a great experience for me to be able to learn so much stuff about this language," said junior Collin Shaw. Studying the culture of Spanish speaking countries was also very interesting, and showed itself to be different from any type of other culture. From Spanish I to AP Spanish V, Bobcats were willing to put in their time and their effort into learning everything about it. "Spanish is not only fun, but it is also an exciting culture that we get the pleasure to learn in our high school," said junior Rachel Massey about her class. Many of the students did not want to stop at Spanish three, but wanted to progress further, all the way up to AP Spanish V. Pre-AP Spanish III student, junior Killian "Kip" Prather, described the language, "Spanish flows off the tongue eloquently," and has taken Spanish since he was a freshman. Student knew that they would have many more opportunities to use their knowledge of Spanish in their bright futures.

~Rachel Augustine

Above: Freshman Ramnik Dahliwal uses her Spanish textbook during Mrs. Guarino's class to help her complete her assignment. The students were learning about Hispanic countries, and maps from the textbook helped the students better understand this lesson. Spanish textbooks were one of the many resources students used to learn the language.

Above: Freshman Fahim Ahmend asks his teacher, Miss Kastrup, a question about the new verb tenses the class is learning. Understanding verb tenses in Spanish enabled the students to speak the language at a higher level. After learning the verb tenses, students practiced these tenses through different assignments and presentations.

This year French class was full of committed students, enthusiastic teachers, and exposure to new cultures. Sophomore, Gracia Mususa stated, "It's my family's first language. I came here when I was young and my family didn't want me to forget. It's the way I communicate with them." For some people like Gracia, taking French was a way to communicate, while for others it was appealing because, "It's one of the romance languages," stated junior Amanda Touma. A typical day in French class consisted of learning new tenses and vocabulary words, sometimes through watching movies in French! It also included learning about different French speaking countries by bringing in their native foods. This was sophomore Ben Robson's favorite memory, "In French I we made French dishes from certain recipes and shared them with our families. It exposed me to French culture." French class allowed students to be creative by giving projects that could be acted out in front of the class with props or be shot as a movie. Every year these students grasped a greater knowledge of the language, and were able to put that knowledge to the test on the annual trip to France or Canada every summer. Sophomore Ana Arthur took advantage of an unique opportunity where she went to Paris for two weeks with a French student she had been assigned to, and explored all that France had to offer. The student in turn came to America and lived with her for two weeks. "I want to major in International Law and do something with French when I get older, commented Ana. Ana was not the only one who took what she learned in French to help her in her job career. For example, senior Laura Macgowan said, "I am hoping to major in linguistics." French class was a fun and effective way to develop a greater knowledge of critical language skills needed in the world today.

~Rachel DeVore

Above: Senior William "DJ" Dyson writing a composition in French class. Writing compositions helped the students learn new vocabulary by looking up words they did not know in dictionaries. Building a strong vocabulary was a key part when learning the language.

left: Junior Daphne Aguirre diligently writing her story. Although the story she was working on was hard, there were many resources to help her such as the teacher, a dictionary, or other students. Once she finished, Daphne had to memorize and present it to her class.

Yearbook Photojournalism

Crop it Like it's Hot!

Below: Kierra Johnson is hanging up a poster for advertising Buddy Pictures. When the students were not working on spreads, they helped with advertising and selling yearbooks. Advertising helped inform the students of sales, special opportunities to be in the yearbook, such as Buddy Pictures and important information like picture dates and submission deadlines.

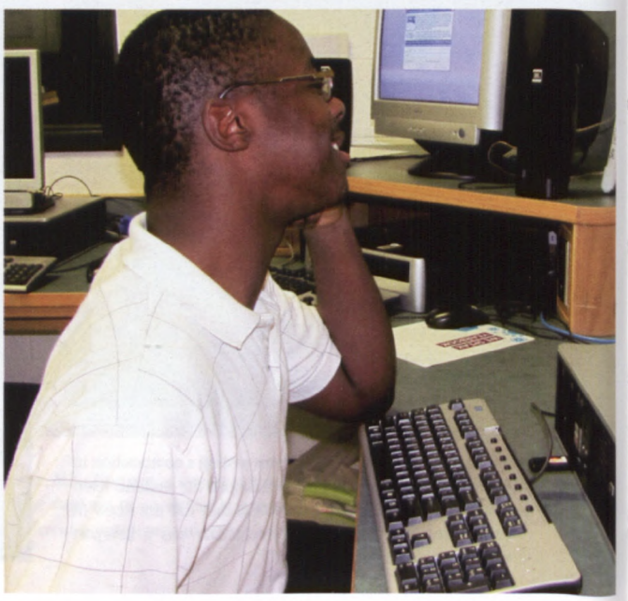

Want to know who works on the yearbook? Battlefield High School has a whole class dedicated to making the yearbook the best it can be! Junior Kelli Herr, one of the yearbook editors, absolutely loved her yearbook class. "I like to be creative and take pictures," she stated. The editors made sure everyone was on task to get the yearbook completed on time. Besides the editors, the yearbook was made up of staff members who designed, photographed and wrote for the yearbook as well. Sophomore Jordan Blanchette said, "I love to make spreads, and help designing a book full of memories." Junior Rachel Kerxton also said, "I believe the yearbook class will help me succeed by helping me become a better photographer and journalist." Editors of this year's yearbook included Sabrena Fary, Abby Regis, Rachel Fraga, Rachel DeVore, Kelli Herr, Bianca Mannino, Brianna Tucker and Business Managers Saydee Bocanenegra and Lauren Trahan. Yearbook required enormous amounts of hard work and dedication, and students were willing to put forth the effort. The yearbook would not be complete without the yearbook staff!

Journalism

Have no fear, the newsies are here!

Take a dive into "Inside 150000" and learn about Battlefield's newspaper and journalism staff! The Journalism class wrote, edited, and designed the Battlefield newspaper. The underclassmen wrote for the newspaper, edited among themselves, and then passed their work onto the editors. Junior Emily Cramer said, "I think Journalism is a good class to take if you're interested in becoming a journalist or an author of any sort. We also learn about the history of journalism and newspapers." The editors were the true heart of the newspaper, and tended to be upperclassmen. They edited everything before it was published, making sure all the details were accurate, that quotes were properly credited and that photographs were correctly captioned. The Editor-in-Chief, Senior Gracie Billingsley said, "Being an editor is hard work and time consuming, but it's worth it to create a solid newspaper for the Battlefield population." The Journalism class loved what they did, and they published a great newspaper.

~Brandon Attiliis

Above: Senior Gracie Billingsley, the Editor in Chief for Journalism, is editing and designing the newspaper. Editors were the students who had taken the class before, and had experienced working with the newspaper. Being an editor came with a big workload, but she was willing to do it!

Right: Senior Gavin Tomlin and sophomore Jack Schnorbus are working on writing for the newspaper. These Journalism students worked hard to do their part. Interviews, photographs and writing were all part of the Journalism process.

Left: Freshmen Maggie Stickel and Keran Herron write and read through journals looking for ideas. Journalism taught students how to read newspapers and write successfully. This insured the creation of a solid newspaper.

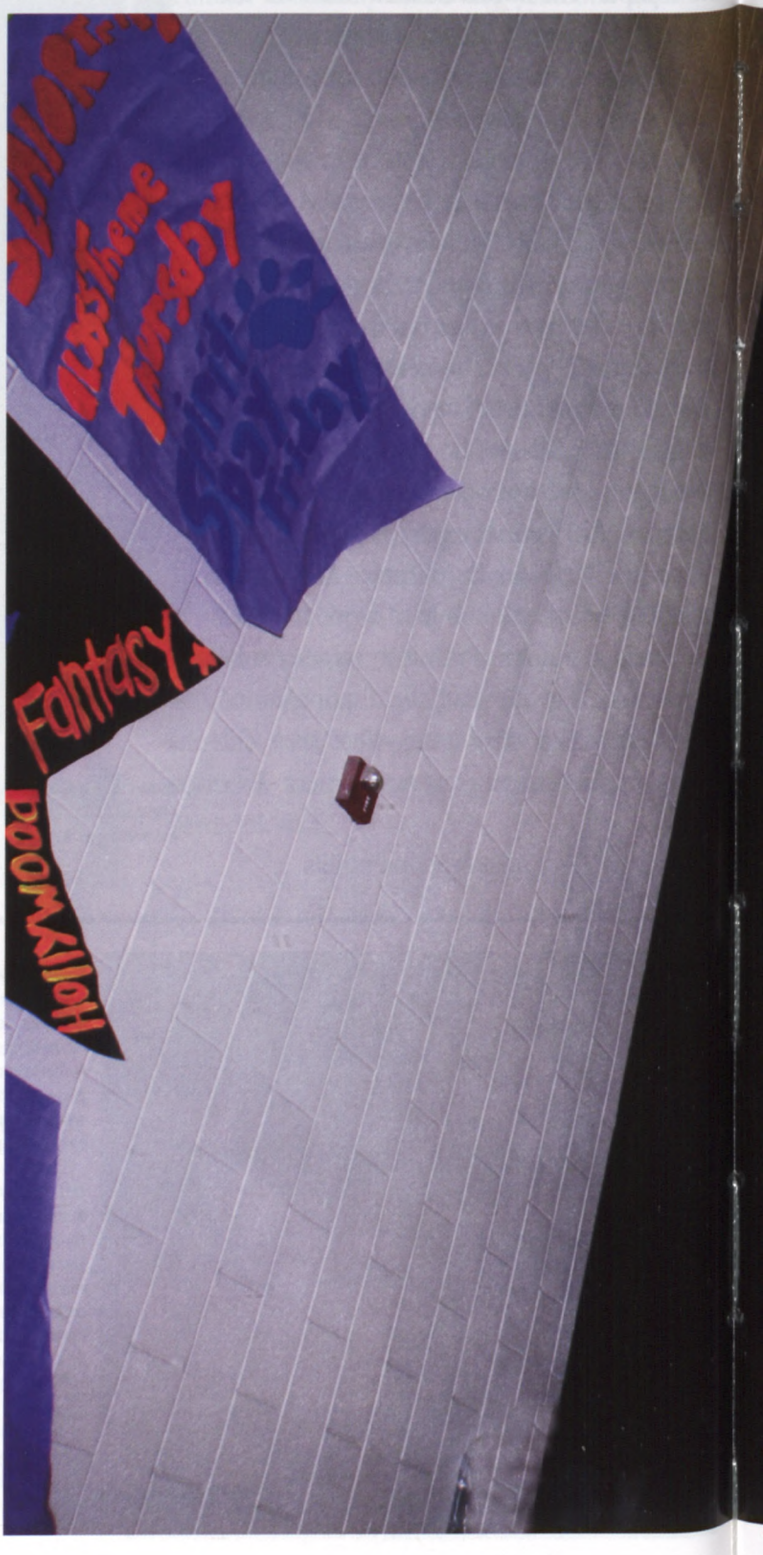

Clubs

Commitment to the Old Brings Community to the New Year

When a great year ends, and people think that there is no way things can get any better, another year comes along that exceeds everyones expectations. Clubs strive to give students a place where they fit in, feel accepted, and get involved in their local community, because everyone wants to be involved in some way. For each grade level, clubs meant something different to each student. For the freshmen, it was a place to create something completely original that they could carry out through their four years of high school. For the sophomores, clubs were a place where they continued to build upon the impact that they wanted to make on the school and the local community. For the juniors, it was a time of planning, because the end of their years at high school were coming soon. For the seniors, clubs were the place where they left their mark. The clubs were a place where the seniors would be remembered for their commitment; from their commitment came a new community that incorporated the entire student body. No matter what grade a student was in, everyone wanted that specific group of people around them that understand who they were, accepted who they are, and love them for exactly who they are. DECA, Guitar, FCA, EDGE, Environmental, and Equestrian club are just six of the many clubs that students were involved in, and through their involvement they achieved these accepting and supportive community. Through their participation in clubs students won many awards, formed many friendships, and made the school and local community a better place to live. They were involved in creating a new beginning.

Anime Club

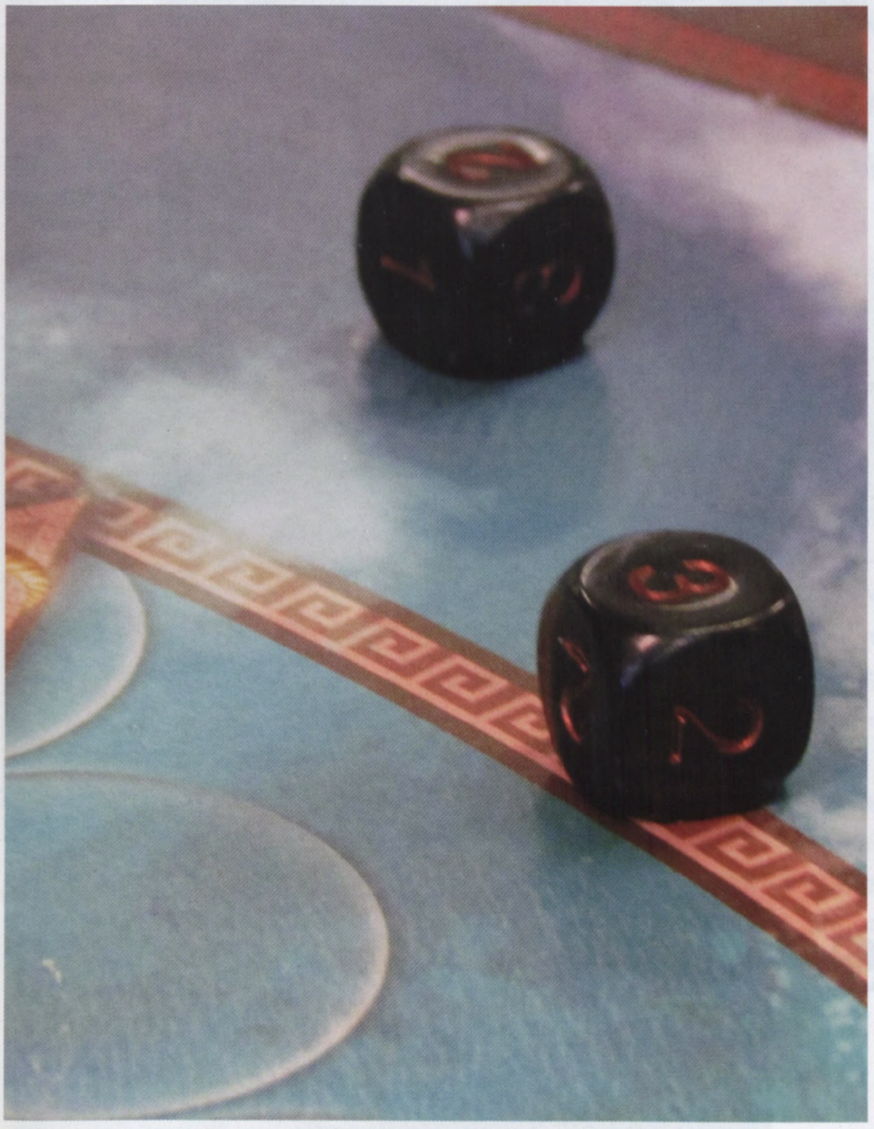

Anime club was a fun way to interact with people with similar interests. It gave students the opportunity to meet others with a passion for Anime, which is the study of its art, creating the drawings in ink and with technology, watching Anime films and reading animated Japanese books. Sophomore Cassandra Sheets said she joined the club, "Because my friend invited [me], and I already liked Anime, I wanted to meet other people who enjoyed it too." This club gave the students a way to express themselves through Anime, which included hand drawn pictures as well as computer generated. In addition to creating and studying Anime, students also watched movies and video games. Sophomore Morgan Engelhardt said, "I like how we have fun, watch movies, play games, and make posters to bring awareness for the club."

Board Game Club

Battlefield's Board Game club was a good way for students to sit back and blow off steam after a long day of school. They would laugh, play board games and enjoy one another's company. Senior Dylan Hellems said, "I get to socialize with different people and play all the games, and I have become good friends with many new people." The club opened up new doors to introduce people to new games and take student's minds off technology. Senior Andrew Park said, "There's a huge variety of games you would play, also learning about the history of the games." ~Paige Kyzer

Book Club

"The worth of a book is to be measured by what you can carry away from it." ~James Bryce

Some students at BHS took full advantage of the opportunities reading provides and hit the books hard this year. Members of book club sought to gain more than just a story from the books they read, but wanted the ability to share opinions, thoughts, and new ideas. They really wanted to be able to take something away from each book they read and relate it to society today. "We read the books on our own and come to book club to talk about what we read. We use the books as triggers to get us thinking and start discussion," freshman Kameron Wilhelm said. The Battlefield Book Club met once a month in the library and discussed the book they had read. "We like the intimate environment, and we like having the ability to openly discuss things. We want book club to be a place where people feel comfortable," said sophomore Silu Tang. Book Club helped provoke thoughts, sharing different ideas, and brought students together who all shared a common love for books. ~Miranda Stevens

Craving A Creation

Culinary Club

For some people cooking was just a fun thing do, for others it was a lifestyle and a work of art. Culinary Club was an opportunity for students to come together as many people have been doing for centuries. Food has bonded and served as a common interest throughout history, and Culinary Club kept that going. All the members loved to eat good food. When asked about his favorite part about Culinary Club, Freshman Jose Mendoza said "I loved getting to eat the food I had cooked myself." Freshman Ella Dang agreed on the best part of the club, "You get to eat!" she replied excitedly. For many it was a learning experience, junior Olivia Kil said, "You learn a lot from it." The experiences gained in Culinary Club provided knowledge for people to use outside of school. Freshman Jose Mendoza shared "From what I've learned in Culinary Club, I'm able to cook for my mom." Culinary Club was not only a fun thing to be a part of, but a way of learning about cultures, lifestyles, and meeting new friends.

President of the Debate team, senior Nick Bond said, "Despite being a small group, we are all incredibly motivated and interested in what we do. Our team is a testament of how self motivation can propel success." Even the newest members of the team contributed significantly to its success. Freshman Kajoul Gupta said, "Making it to metro-finals was one of the best experiences because I was exposed to some of the best Extempores in the nation!" Throughout the year, the teams took many first place championships including the Northwest Regional Title for Debate. Senior Marcell Crawford said, "My hard work is a direct result from my partners' experience and guidance from more experienced members of the team." As individuals, the debaters and forensicaters earned many titles, and even made it on to national tournaments. Before going into rounds, Debate coach Mr. Florer said "If you give a man a fire, he is warm for a day; but if you set him on fire he is warm for the rest of his life, so light 'um up!" The debating Bobcats proved that with the fuel to win, even a small match can light up a successful year.

DECA

DECA was a very popular club amongst Battlefield students. DECA is a business and marketing club that teaches finance, hospitality, management, and the importance of helping the less fortunate. Being the largest club in the school, DECA has made such a positive impact on many students. Junior Emily Harris stated, "as district president, it changed my life to where I know how to go after my dreams and I've become close with so many people." Working with many charities, DECA raised thousands of dollars for organizations such as the American Cancer Society, BARN, St. Judes, and MADD. Members competed in competed at Districts, States and Nationals in role playing, as well as writing and submitting manuals involving community service projects. The "DECA-cated" teachers, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Homan and Mrs. Adkins put their hearts into this club. DECA welcomed all types of people. It was a also a great way to meet new people, and get involved in the community DECA also gave a sneak peak to the business and marketing worlds.

After Kristen's brother had been involved in a drunk driving accident, she gathered up the courage to speak at Walk Like MADD. "I've never had the motivation to get up and speak in front of many people until my brother's accident. I wanted to show people how negative it effects your life and hopefully change peoples opinions about driving under the influence."

Equestrian Club

Sponsored by Mrs. Hill, the Equestrian Club was one of the most unique clubs at Battlefield. "Equestrian Club is the only club that is centered around horses, and is a club that solely requires interest to join, as opposed to experience or skill," said junior Amber Kozacek. Members bonded on trail rides and the first of many fund-raising events for barns in need. Junior Cara Viar said, "My favorite part was getting to know all of the horse lovers at this school." Every meeting offered an opportunity to learn something new. Equestrian Club provided a place for horse enthusiasts to experience new things alongside people with the same interests. The lessons learned at Equestrian Club helped members grow both as riders and as people.

Right: Playing a Christian game, freshmen Stephanie Hickman and Nathan Guo have fun. Students learned about Christianity in Edge Club and got to meet new people with similar interests to them. They applied their faith to games they played and talks they had.

Right: Sitting together, members of Edge Club pray as a group. Group discussions were also held for students to discuss their thoughts. Being able to share their ideas was one reason why they were so close as a group.

In room 1114, Edge Club was held every Thursday after school. "We play games, talk, and learn about Christianity," said freshman Nathan Guo. The students had fun, and the club had a very friendly atmosphere. Members liked it "because it's revolved around Jesus and gives me an opportunity to share my faith. It's good fellowship with other Christians," said freshman Stephanie Hickman. In Edge Club, students made new friends who shared the same interests.

Environmental Club

Every other Monday, from 2-3 PM, members of the Environmental Club worked on making Battlefield a more ecofriendly place. After meeting in Mr. Bair's upstairs classroom after school, students took garbage cans and collected the recyclable trash that was left outside of classrooms. "We collect recyclables from classrooms around the school and promote a greener lifestyle by educating the youth," said sophomore Sarah Shupe. The members' hard work benefited them and the environment. "I get to directly impact my surrounding community," said junior Aaron Guo. Students learned from their time in Environmental Club. "It's a pretty good experience and it helps both you and your environment because you gain knowledge," said junior George Andrews. Environmental Club offered a great opportunity to students who wanted to help the environment.

FBLA: Future Business Leaders of America. This club was all about two things: developing business and leadership skills and applying them by giving back to the community. It offered members a chance to get a look at the world of business and gain a few years of experience in the process. Senior Anna Phommachanh shared, "I plan on majoring in business," and joined the club to get an idea of what she could expect. Freshman Linda Kil said, "We go on lots of field trips to learn about business, but that's not all it's about. We volunteer and help the community too." Aside from attending conferences and workshops to develop useful skills, FBLA members also participated in community service projects. They ran Battlefield's Operation Turkey, a food drive for a local homeless shelter and food pantry, and were in charge of the annual Teacher Tricycle race. Battlefield's FBLA members put in the time and effort today to create a foundation of useful skills in order to lead the way to a better tomorrow. -Paige Moore

A few group members pose after a small Thursday morning praise. After a few homemade breakfast snacks, they jumped right into an opening game, bible lesson, discussed upcoming volunteer opportunities and break for class. Sophomore Karen Tran jokingly said, "We like to think of FCA as 'Fun-Lovers-of-Jesus' Christ Association!"

Left: Senior leader, Michelle Hettmann speaking to the group. She had organized tons of meetings, many bible lessons, and mission projects throughout the year. "Really, it's just a way for students to gather in fellowship and experience Christ in school." Michelle was in FCA since her sophomore year and strove to major in Human Development to become a youth minister at Virginia Tech.

Every Tuesday afternoon and Thursday morning, a special group of students gathered in fellowship with fellow Christians in Battlefield High School to advocate positive values. "It's amazing what can happen when you let God into your life-- all your worries begin to disappear," said senior Michelle Hettmann. Being a Christian and being an athlete was not required; with an open mind and an open heart, members were encouraged to promote core values, reach out to others in need, and be active in their communities. From the Matthew 25:35 benefit concert, to food drives, to building a well with safe drinking water for children in Africa, FCA had some of the most devoted, faithful, and wholehearted students. Aside from their routine bible study and games coordinated to each lesson, they also knew how to have a good time. With annual Christmas parties, fall picnics, and spring cookouts, these Bobcats showed that having fun while living for Christ is an incredible experience that anyone can have!

The Future Doctors of America Club was a very important part of Battlefield. It attracted people who planned on going into the medical field. Future Doctors of America taught them many of the intricacies of medicine that they would have to know, and requirements they would have to complete in order to become a doctor. Although becoming a doctor is hard work, the club showed that students could also have fun while learning. Junior Ameeta Kumar said, "It brings out your personality." This club helped students decide if they really wanted to go into the field of medicine. Some of the suggested classes to take if they were really interested in going into the field of medicine were Chemistry and Biology. The participants in this club proved that if they work hard and put their mind to it, they can go far.

Gay-Straight Alliance

GSA was started in 2010 and has been a safe place for every student to stand up for LGBT rights.

The mission of the club has always been LGBT youth and straight allies defying homophobia. GSA strided to create a safe school environment free of all bullying and harassment. They met on Wednesdays from 2-3 P.M. where members discussed important current events, spoke their minds, and watched videos related to the club.

When asked how the Gay-Straight Alliance has improved our school, senior Ursula Porter answered, "GSA has provided a safe environment for the students in our school who may feel different or afraid of judgment. Everyone is extremely friendly and welcoming."

Above: Senior Kianoosh Asar, GSA Secretary, listens carefully to the topic being discussed. Everyone in GSA sat in a circle to encourage members to speak up. Kianoosh was asked how GSA has inspired him and responded that, "GSA has inspired me to work harder as an LGBT rights supporter and it has made me stand tall in front of homophobic people."

Last year senior and Go Club President Jordan Soriana obtained construction equipment to clear a walkable path through the forest. GO Club members hoped to extend the path further for longer future AFSP walks.

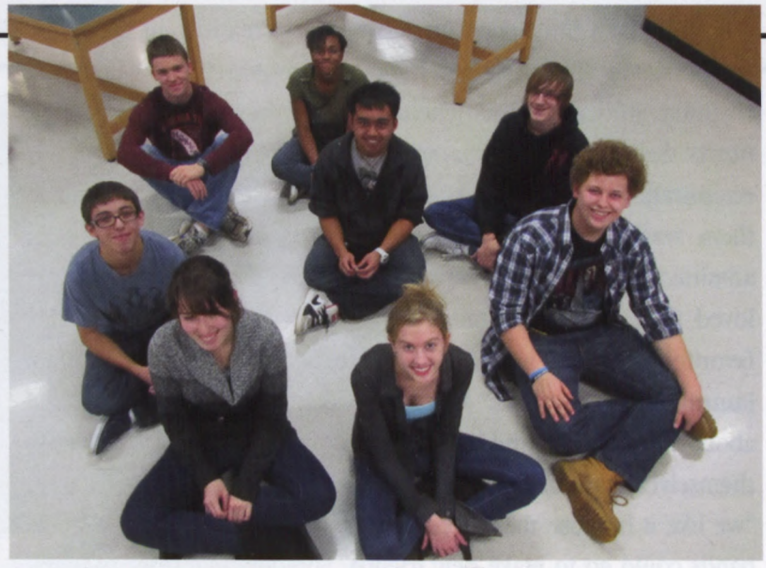

Global Operations (GO) Club was a small group of students looking to make a difference in the community as well as the world. Although only formed two years ago by senior Jordan Soriano, the club's American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (AFSP) walk has become a huge success. To senior Christopher Wyatt the AFSP walk means the most to him, he said, "I'm in GO club for the AFSP walk. That's really matters to me." With sponsors, 5K walks, bake sales, and other fundraisers; the club raised money for AFSP to help prevent suicide. Club member senior Sean Ross said, "I like GO Club because we not only focus on issues around the school, but also on the issues that concern our community, like volunteering at local fundraising events." Guitar Club

"Guitar Club opens up the musical creativity in all of us" senior Kevin Engle shared happily. It was a place where the rhythmic students at Battlefield could gather and play as their hearts desired. The calm atmosphere provided by Mr. Dittmer, encouraged students to become a part of the club, and made them want to attend every meeting. Junior Chase Heatwole admitted "Mr. Dittmer's a pretty cool guy." The students clearly loved their sponsor as much as the club. When asked what his favorite part was, junior Chase Heatwole simply stated "just jammin' with everyone." Members of Guitar Club were passionate about their music and use the club as an outlet to express themselves without any restrictions. Senior Kevin Engle shared, "we like it because there aren't any limits." Students who were in bands could go to make new friends. Some people went to learn how to play as well. Many students desired to turn music into a career, so the could play forever. The hard work and drive these students had to make it in the music world reflected their love for music.

BobcatCafé

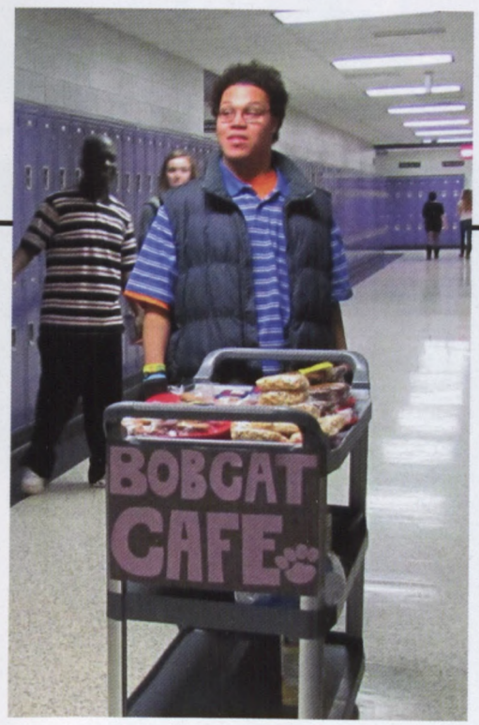

Baked Goods Weekly

Bobcat Café was a business run by part of the Special Education Department at Battlefield High School. The purpose of the business was to teach students life skills, as well as teaching students with special needs functional math, reading and social skills. Students worked directly with the teachers and paraprofessionals to shop for supplies at the local Giant, bake treats, and sell baked goods to the staff of Battlefield. "I like to go shopping at Giant with my class" Larnelle O'Gilvie stated, "I like to bake brownies with my teacher." Students are able to focus on things like making a grocery list, following a recipe, and making change. The profits were used to buy new supplies each week; however, at the end of the year and remaining profits were donated to the Arc of PWC, West Haven Children's Orphanage in Jamaica and Autism Speaks.

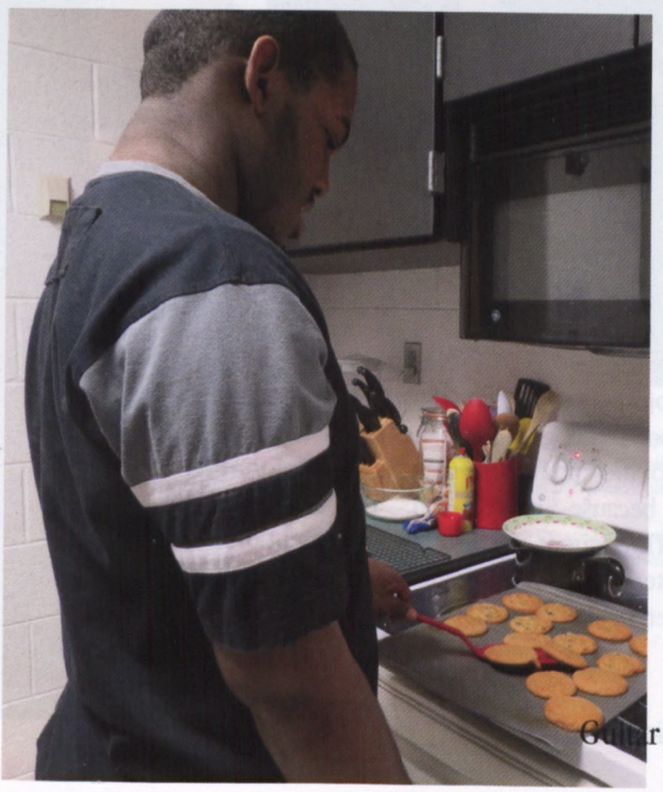

Bobcat Café offered cookies, brownies, rice crispy treats, coffee, and orange juice. Bobcat Café also offered special items like cupcakes for holidays. "I like to help make cupcakes for the holidays. We made pretty Valentine's Day cupcakes. We sold them all. I help make the homemade icing for the cupcakes. I use a mixer to mix butter and sugar. I also like to make rice crispy treats because I can make them by myself!" Jessica Harris said. The students really enjoyed doing this every week. "I like to bake brownies for Bobcat Café. My favorite thing to do is to sell things. I like to walk around the hall on Friday and sell to the teachers," Orbith Garcia expressed. Whenever the Bobcat Café came around, there were hungry staff and students following. It gave everyone at Battlefield another reason to look forward to Fridays.

InteractYourWay IntoABrighter Future

Interact Club

For the students of Interact Club, it was more then just a club, it was a way of life by helping out their community one person at a time. For Senior Ha Young Shin, Interact Club was more than just an extra curricular," "It's similar to Key Club, but there are less people, so you bond like family." Freshman Ella Dang said, "We do smaller projects that bring us closer by helping out." There were no pre-set hours of school credit given to members of the Interact Club; these kids were in it solely out of the goodness of their hearts. Senior Amy Bailey said, "We don't help people, because its required." The club was all about volunteering to help others. Throughout the year, they had multiple volunteer assignments that students in interact club participate in to make a change. These kids were definitely doing something very special for the community.

Helping Hands

Key Club

As a part of the oldest and largest volunteer community service organization for high school students, Battlefield Key Club proudly stood by their motto, "Caring is our way of life." Members engaged in a variety of projects from fund raising to tutoring and more. "I loved having the opportunity to help third graders in reading and math," said Senior Jamie Shalvey, who frequently tutored at Gravely Elementary School. Junior Aaron Guo, the club's treasurer, said, "My personal favorite project was when we volunteered at the Girls on the Run event, cheering on runners and their parents throughout the race." Junior Grace Charlton said, "Key Club taught me that community service is the first step in becoming a leader." Students were continually inspired to take initiative in changing their communities for a better future.

Latin Club was a very relaxed and interesting club. Latin club had a meeting once a month, and accepted any level students. Each student had to sacrifice an apple as an initiation into the club; the apple is considered the god of knowledge. When asked about the meetings, freshman Cassandra McGinnis said, "We discuss all aspects of mythology, mostly Greek, and thoroughly translate challenging sentences and talk about how it relates to our society today." Along with the academic aspects of this club, the students liked to relax and have fun, and all led to the end of the year Roman party called "Saturnalia."

Math League Association

Students at Battlefield flocked to room 2118 on a Tuesday afternoon in search of the Virginia Math League Association. The program's sponsor, Mr. Meermans, gave each of the anxious students a test composed of six difficult math problems to be completed in thirty minutes. Junior Christie Kim said, "It was challenging and timed, but it helped me get better grades in math." While many attended the meetings for extra credit opportunities, they left with more than a better grade. "It helped me practice my mathematic skills," said junior Eunice Kim. Students discovered new ways to apply the skills that they gained at the contest and math club. "I will teach younger students who are eager to learn and excel," said sophomore Trishal Patel. The VMLA encouraged students to think differently and fostered a love for math that students will carry with them in their future endeavors.

As the prosecutors and the defense read over their opening statements, the witnesses waited patiently to be called to the stand. No, this was not real court; it was a mock trial. Here was a club where one could experience being a lawyer or working with the court. Sponsor Mr. Cruz said, "I started the club because I competed in mock trials when I was in high school and college, and I wanted to spread my passion of law to Battlefield students." Mock Trial inspired freshman William Laingen, " I'm interested in having a Political Science major in college so a Mock Trial is a good stepping stone." The club has also helped sophomore Victoria Rasior nurture her passion to be a lawyer, she said "when I get older I would really like being a lawyer!" By joining the club students received first hand experience in being in court.

National Art Honor Society

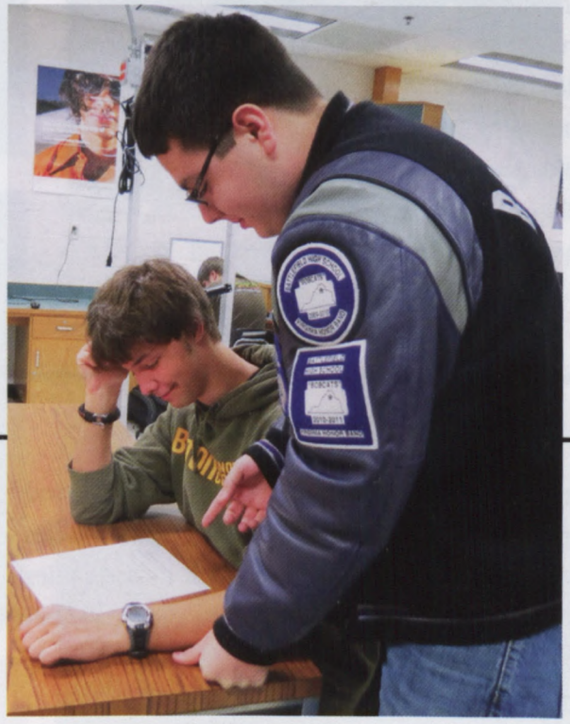

The National Art Honor Society was a group for the students of Battlefield High School to express themselves through art. Mrs. Burns and Mrs. Graham, the teachers who led the National Art Honor Society, were "really dedicated teachers who genuinely care about their students," said Senior Cathy Kwon. Along with being skilled in and appreciative of art, this group participated in competitions and worked on paint projects for the school. They had opportunities to get scholarships for their artwork. The National Art Honor Society was for students exceptional in art requiring at least one prior art class with a grade of a 'B' or higher.

National Honor Society

The National Honor Society focused on the community service, academics, character, and leadership aspects of a student. Members participated in many community service projects such as blood drives, donating to soldiers, helping elementary schools, and tutoring fellow classmates. When asked if NHS was rewarding, senior Alex Fairbanks replied, "Yes, not just for hours, but you can help people in your own community. You think everyone has it all, but they don't." In order to be inducted, students obtained a 3.7 GPA or higher, received teacher recommendations, and demonstrated experience with leadership and volunteering. Outstanding grades, leadership abilities, great character, and the desire to give back to the community were qualities of all NHS students.

National English Honor Society

The English Honor Society (N.E.H.S.) was an organization full of students committed and passionate for their love of English. Members united together to assist other students who needed help in the subject. Without the N.E.H.S. the Bobcat Writing Center would not have be complete. "It is aiding students in their writing endeavors," said senior co-president Garrett O'Brien. The organization has also become a great tool for students to get to know each other better. "All students can connect through our language to better empower our future together," explained senior Historian Jordyn Imber. The N.E.H.S also helped students in their future careers. "It helps me because I want to be a journalist for Rolling Stones one day, and I get to experience the leadership and and community roles of English," said senior Briana Tucker. ~Ana Tobar

ViveLaFrance!

National French Honor Society

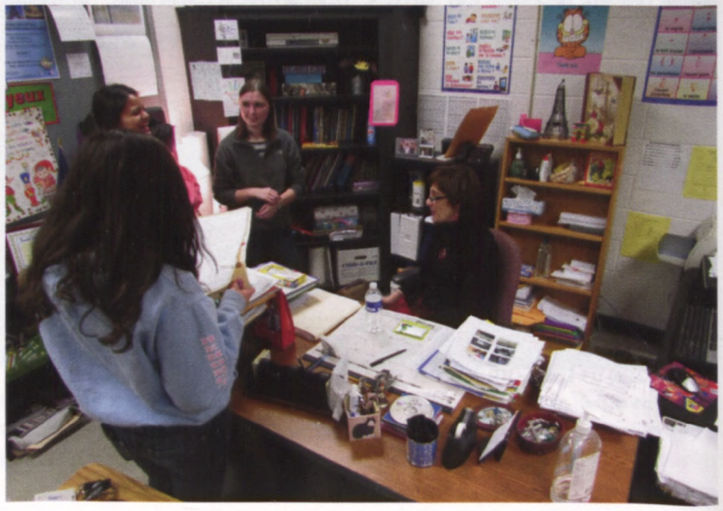

The French language has been admired as an exquisite and romantic language for centuries; it has also offered many opportunities for students everywhere. "French will help me gain job opportunities because of my diverse language skills," commented junior Megan Villaciencio about the French language. Students who take French, love what it has taught them through the years. Not only did it teach them how to speak French, but also how to experience the French culture in a whole new way. The French Honor Society also reached out to other clubs to help with fundraising money for other organizations such as Doctors Without Borders and tutoring students. Meetings were always a great time for bonding with the members because they are always fun-filled and productive. "French has been a great experience and it has allowed me to meet new and exciting people," stated senior Kimmie Schuldt. The French Honor Society was an excellent example how students could connect through language and help others as well.

National History Club

The National History Club at Battlefield put a high value on educating club about the events of the past. As once stated by George Santayana, a 20th century philosopher, "Those who do not learn from history are doomed to repeat it." The club promoted global awareness and encouraged students to take advantage of the resources history provides. Sophomore Mohit Jakher said, "We inform people about the importance of history, its connection to various cultures, and relevance to life today." The members of National History Club met twice a month, and spent time between meetings preparing history focused presentations. "We research anything related to history and share what we are interested in with other members," said senior Damien Lee. Students who were a part of National History Club learned about everything from the population density of India to the cultural practices of Korea. Members were able to share their heritage, as well as explore new interests in other cultures. Although the past could not be altered, the History Club applied what was learned through history to create a better tomorrow.

National Science Honors Society

National Science Honor Society (NSHS) is a national organization honoring and encouraging student excellence in science. Students participated in many events throughout the year, including the volunteering at local elementary schools, participating in science fairs, Science Night and Catworks. Senior Pahul Hanjra commented that, "NSHS has helped teach me how rewarding it is to give back to the community through science, and helped me master how to wash dishes as well." NSHS gave students an opportunity to branch out and do something they have never done before. Junior Alex Hickey reflected that "Catworks will be something that I'll always remember because being able to plan and run a huge event like this as a student is a huge opportunity." According to Ms. Mcleod, 'Catworks' is our primary service project. It is a science academy open to 100 elementary school students on May 12. It is modeled after Harry Potter's Hogwarts. The elementary students are assigned houses, then attend classes in earth science, biology, chemistry and physics taught by our high school students. Its a lot of fun for every one who is involved!" Many members of this society planned on pursing careers in science. ~Brook Lykes

National Math Honors Society

National Math Honor Society helped students at Battlefield discover the joys of Math. When asked how NMHS will assist her in the future, junior Kayla Townsend said, "It has prepared me for being a part of my community and using my gifts to assist others. The tutoring that we do, helps to reach out to our peers." Many members spent their afternoons tutoring peers who struggled in their Math classes. Senior Gabby Cirigliano commented that what she enjoyed most about NMHS was that she, "made many friends through NMHS." Sharing a talent for Math brought these students together and created a great environment for learning and solving problems. ~Brook Lykes and Melian Miller

¡VivaLaRaza!

Spanish Honor Society

A little spice of the Spanish culture went a long way in capturing the minds of Battlefield students. The Spanish Honor Society participated in the festivities of the Hispanic culture, which involved speaking the Language, to trying the cuisine, and learning some of the dances. Senior Emily Surprenant said, "I joined the Spanish Honor Society because it allows me to put the Spanish that I learned to use in small ways." Senior and President of NSAS, senior Danya Galdamez commented, "Spanish can help in the society because you get to learn something you have never leaned or heard about. I wanted to be the President because I wanted to teach other students about the Hispanic culture!" The National Spanish Honor Society provided students an opportunity to excel in what they learned about the language and the comprehension, as well as allow students to always have a bit of Spanish Culture.

EatRightBe Bright PhD

PhD (Physical Health and Development) was a club where students came together to promote a healthier lifestyle by supporting others, and each other, to exercise more often and making healthier decisions when eating, and spreading awareness of diseases. The determined president of PhD, junior Jaehoon Lee said, "Our goal is to raise awareness of being healthy." PhD was a way for students to adjust to healthier lives and help researchers towards curing diseases. The PhD Club wanted to spread the word and let their efforts reach out to not just Northern Virginia, but other states as well. Within PhD, fundraising was also done to to support efforts to eradicate the rare disease Progeria. They also wanted to change the nation and create better quality life for people through exercise and good health. Sophomore Bryan Quach commented, "PhD makes me say to myself, be confident." PhD's goal was to inform as many people as possible of healthier options and improve the quality of life for everybody. "Together PhD will make a better and healthier future," said junior Ye Young Song. The students in PhD all wanted to change the world, one person at a time, with their efforts.

NeverEnding Change

Peer Diversity

Right: Junior Molly Rist sports a "Born This Way" shirt to support Peer Diversity at one of their Holiday Parties. The famous message was much like that of the club. Peer Diversity believed that people should be accepted for who they are.

Below: Mr. Dittmer, Graciela Billingsley, Sarai Arbus, Jacqueline Javier, Anthony Vanderveldt IV, Khusboo Bhatia, Madison Sunderland, Bernard Coles, Han Min Cho, Jumoom Ahmed, Tyler Callender, Ryan Waltz, Tyler Harris, Eric Yoo, Emma Ashworth, Jack Villani, Jessica Son, Wayne Murray, Geo Fuentes, Kinsey Kirchmyer, Jazzmin Dabney, Ryan Pfeifle, and Chun Hatfield.

Nationwide, every seven minutes a child is being bullied. 85 percent of the time, there was no intervention by a teacher or student. Peer Diversity was a direct branch of the anti-defamation league, or ADL. ADL built bridges of communication, understanding and respect among diverse groups, and existed all over the world. "Through peer diversity, I stand up for others to those who are hateful and fight to promote an overall safe school environment," says senior Anna Beardsley. The mission of this club was to make school a safe place for students to be themselves. Members helped the community become more aware of the daily issues through anti-bullying pledges, attending ADL's concert against hate, and they have taught freshman English classes over a two day period how to be more accepting, just to name a few. "This club is a necessity to our school because our student body needs to become more aware and accepting of the wide variety of students here, and we spread that message," added sophomore Ryan Waltz. These people made a change and set a contagious example of how we should treat our peers.

FutureLeaders

Student Council

They were the future leaders of the country. SCA was comprised of students who wanted to make a difference and did not want to wait to do it. SCA encouraged student leadership and school spirit through the many events and fund raisers they organized. This year, SCA sponsored multiple events including a Charity Water fund raiser, Spirit Week, and the Thanksgiving Food Drive. These events encouraged school spirit and impact on community. The club's members were all elected into their positions, with exception of class delegates. Class delegates were required to submit applications which were approved by their class officers. Junior Kristen Loehle, the Junior Class Secretary, shared, "The delegates are a huge help; they are just as much a part of the team as the elected officers." SCA represented the student body's interests and inspired Battlefield to take pride in their school.

Sketch Club

Right: Sophomore Virginia Gagnon sketches a self portrait. Out of all of her drawings, this was one of her favorites. During each meeting, the students were given objectives of what to draw, to challenge and amuse them.

Below: Senior Denzel Asiedu quickly illustrating a couple of anime characters. Completed in no more than five minutes, Denzel turned a blank piece of paper into a masterpiece. Utilizing his talent, he hopes to attend an art school in the fall to continue his career path.

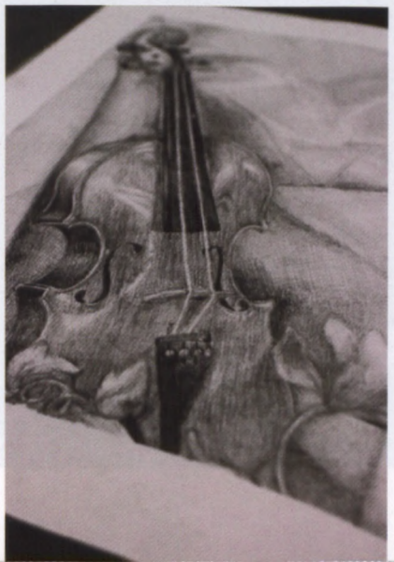

Tj Sketch Club was a place where Bobcats could embrace their work. Mr. McGaugh gathered up students twice a month to hang out, chat, and show off their art work. Sophomore Jacob Goodridge said, "It has helped me meet more people who do things that I like to do." Students with all experience levels and all types of artwork were encouraged to participate in this fun filled club. Sketch Club was booming with passion and hard work as most of the members hoped to continue with an art incorporated career in the future. When asked about the activities that go on in the club, club president sophomore Victoria Hurlburt expressed, "We try to incorporate different things that would spark interest, would help someone learn or try to gain experience from what they draw." The club was not limited to just drawing, but encompassed poetry and written artistic forms as well. Sketch Club was a great way to experience other artwork and have the pleasure to meet other artists, from beginners to experts. ~Lexi Jewell-Sharma

Scholastic Bowl

On this fast-paced team, knowledge was power. Sponsored by Mrs. Obando, the Academic Team was a group of students who enjoyed testing their wit with a variety of intense, jeopardy-like competitions. The students savored the opportunity to learn in a small, family-like atmosphere. Junior Aaron Guo said that Academic Team is special because, "we're a relatively small group, so we know each other really well." The lessons that students learned did not go to waste. "It was similar to what I usually do in everyday life," said senior Kevin Song. The Academic Team prepared students for their futures as well. "I learned to work as a team, and it let me use the information that I typically don't get the chance to share," shared junior Sara Wedemeyer. Joining the Academic Team gave students the chance to learn and grow as a team, as well as people.

Below: Seniors Brandon Foster and Angela Cho, and Junior Aaron Guo, are looking over the meeting's agenda. Meetings were structured to help students discover the many technical fields their futures might hold. Many students planned on studying technology in college.

The Battlefield High School Space Club created opportunities for students who were interested in the areas of rocketry, astronautics, space science, and related technical fields. It shared information about internships, science camps, and courses for high school and college credit. Although Space Club was created in the 2010-2011 school year, it has grown and flourished faster than the speed of light. The Space Club was a prestigious club, and an honor to join, and required a 3.9 GPA to be considered for an invitation. The club brought together students and faculty from the Science, Math, and Information Technology departments. The club planned to continue its voyage for the many years to come. The Space Club truly was out of this world.

Stepping WithClass

Step Team

Step Team was a diverse and a different type of opportunity for many in at BHS. Many girls found the Step Team to be a fun learning experience. Many were nervous to tryout, like junior Jazzmin Dabney. She became interested to try out for step team after a fellow friend, junior Jeneva Weil suggested it. From basketball game performances to performing at International Night, the Step Team worked hard. The Step Team was filled with students from many different grade levels, including freshmen. For some of the freshmen who joined, it was their first high school sport or club. The girls on the team stayed after Tuesday and Thursday and practiced to perfect their performance. With help from Mr. Calloway and Mr. Mathhewson, the club sponsors, step had their first successful year. Sophomore Hannah Tibbs said she hoped to have many more competitions by her senior year.

Below: Members coming together for a group picture. The society was diverse with many music students and grade levels. Tri-M was filled with many wonderful people who had many talents.

The love for music can be shown in many different ways, for some lucky Battlefield students, Tri-M was how they displayed their love. Tri-M is a music organization put together by the BHS Fine Arts program to display the different musical groups, that form the Fine Arts department. The music organization at Battlefield had another successful year. This year was the first year for many juniors and some seniors after going through a tryout process. The beginning started with the end, as the new president picked up where last year's president left off. This year new music selections and old music/Tri-M traditions, as each part of the music department joined together to show each other their talents. The experience of Tri-M, for many Fine Arts students, was the experience of a lifetime; from the auditions to getting to perform with the seniors. Tri-M helped many musically-inclined students reach their dreams. As the seniors left the harmonious mark on Tri-M, the juniors next year will pick up where they left off.

Right: Senior Erin Moller explains Geometry to juniors Kate Irwin and Paige Kyzer. TSTT members tutor in all subjects. By tutoring, future educators got a real taste of what it is like to be a teacher. Tutoring was a great way to learn how to work with different subjects and different types of kids.

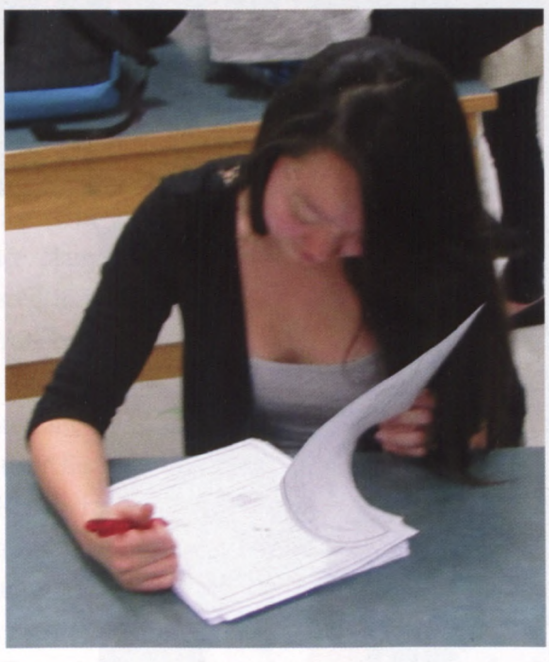

LeadersOfTheFuture

Today's Students, Tomorrow's Teachers

TSTT (Today's Students, Tomorrow's Teachers) is a program set up to help pursue a career in education. Mrs. Adrianne Harrison (special programs coordinator) and Mrs. Wright (club sponser) guided these students through their high school careers. Club member, junior Nia Knight, said she joined TSTT because, "I love working with kids." Her reason was similar to junior Jazzmin Dabney's, who said, "I love kids, I've always wanted to be a teacher, I just know it's for me." Monthly meetings provided these club members with standardized practice tests, tutoring, job shadowing, co-teaching opportunities, and assistance with college admissions through field trips and job fairs. After joining, the club members had a chance to receive a 50% tuition scholarship towards college.

Below: Students of all ethnicities listen to the guest speaker. They respected and appreciated what she had to offer. The students learned a truly valuable life lesson.

Battlefield's very own Youth Council/Minority Student Union was dedicated to "bringing African American students together to share common goals and experiences," said senior co-president Daniella Mensah-Abrampah. Guest speakers such as Virginia Tech basketball player Britney Anderson encouraged the students to "never give up, never quit, and prove it to yourselves." Although the main purpose was to empower minorities, the Minority Student Union was open to ethnicities of all kind. Students within this club were looking to extend their education and win scholarships. Senior and Co-President KorKor Kappoe achieved these goals and won the MLK oratorical. Alongside the wonderful progress this club had already made, they had big plans in store for the future. They planned on organizing trips to Historically Black Colleges and Universities as well as NAACP scholarships for next year. This club granted opportunities to all types of student.

It seems like yesterday we were pushing you through our neighborhood in a stroller. You have become the man we had always hoped we would have raised. You are a caring, loving and gentle soul. We miss the little boy you were and love the person you have become. Mom and Dad, your brothers and sister will always be there for you no matter where life takes you. We are proud to be your parents and thankful you are our son. When we look at you we see a child who has been a joy to watch become an adult. We know you will do well as you begin the journey of your adult life.

Thank you for being our son,
Love Mom & Dad

Axiel
We are all so proud of you and cannot wait to see you walk across that stage on graduation day!!!
10 -4 over and out!!
Ronnie, Dakota, and Montanna

Axiel,
Eighteen years ago I was given a wonderful gift - you!! Watching you grow from a courageous, fun loving little boy in to the responsible, loving, charismatic, talented young man you have become is one of the highlights of my life. You have conquered every obstacle placed in your path and become a better person for each and every one. These past eighteen years have only been the beginning for you; you have a bright future ahead. As you walk across that stage on graduation day, I will be smiling from ear to ear (and crying of course) remembering all the past years and looking forward to seeing all that you will accomplish in the years to come. I could not be more PROUD of you!!! Love you BUCKETS!!! ~ Meem

PS. As graduation day approaches, always remember that your Pap is looking down on you smiling. You made him proud every day! Remember all the fun times the two of you shared from being at camp roasting hot dogs, to building our patio, going fishing, watching TV, and all the other things in between. He would be happy to know that you made it all 13 years of school without missing one day! You always held a special place in his heart.

Bianca Jo Mannino

Dear Bianca,
I'm so very proud of you princess, there has been so many challenges that you have overcome. After all those years of school you are finally at the point of going out on your own. You are a responsible young lady and you couldn't make me or your mom more proud to have you as our daughter. We wish you good luck in your future.
Love,
Daddy, Mommy, Felesha, and Bella

Andrew, it is hard to believe that 18 years have passed and the clock is still running. Mom and I remember our family backyard football games. When you were two, Mom tackled you (closed lined you), and you got up, we knew that you were born to be a great running back.

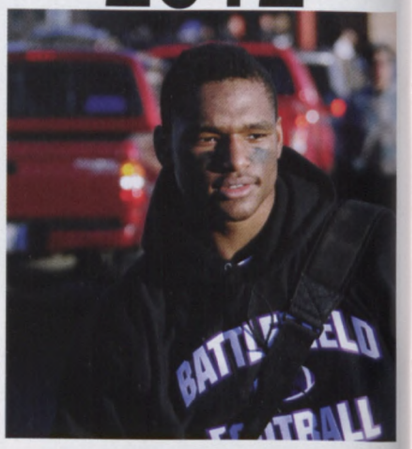

We love you and we are very proud of the path you have taken in life over the past 18 years. You are a very intelligent and articulate young man that has a kind heart.

Your journey is just beginning. Let's call the first 18 years of your life the pre-game warm-ups. As you start the first quarter of your life, take the time to enjoy the journey. College will open your eyes to a new world that will be exciting and intimidating.

Always remember to play to win. The game of life is just like football. Strategically place yourself in a tactical situation to make a play.

Andrew, you are the ultimate play maker and we wish you well on your next journey of your life.

Love, Dad, Mom, and Justin

Being your best is not so much about overcoming the barriers other people place in front of you, as it is about overcoming the barriers we place in front of ourselves. It has nothing to do with how many times you win or lose, and no relation to where you finish in a race. But it does have everything to do with having the vision to dream, the courage to recover from adversity and the determination to never be shifted from your goals. May all of your dreams come true!

From the day you were first born. through the times of being out little girl, and now when you are such a beautiful young woman, we recognized you as very special. Your willingness to help others, to offer your time and ideas to the community and the caring you have always shown to your friends makes you beautiful in so many ways. It is with great pride and joy that we have seen you grow and mature and prepare for the real world. We have no doubt that you will not only be successful, but truly excel. As one page turns and a chapter closes, another opens filled with fun, excitement, and challenges. There is nothing you cannot overcome. We know you are well prepared and you anxiously await the opportunities laying ahead, and we are here to cheer you on. With all our love, we offer our congratulations.

Austin Wagner

Austin,

The past 18 years have been the best years of my life. Watching you mature and excelling at every turn has made me a proud mother. I LIVE THROUGH YOU. Your academic achievements have been superb, and your athletic performances in track and field, wrestling and football have been so fun to watch. I have been your biggest cheerleader and I cannot wait to follow your future dreams, and I look forward to your many successes. I'm proud of you!

Love, Mom

May the sun shine, all day long everything go right, and nothing wrong.
May those you love bring love back to you,
and may all the wishes you wish come true!

Austin,

I have always done my best to teach you, that nothing is impossible; lead from the front; protect those who can't protect themselves; live life by the "Golden Rule". You are a remarkable person, son and friend! Lew, you will have really good times in your future, and challenging ones, but it's the challenging ones that will test the metal of a MAN and the metal of YOU! I hope mom and I have prepared you for life, I know I have learned so much from you and I sometimes marvel in what you have accomplished in the last 18 years. If you give the same EFFORT in the next chapter of your life, you can do anything! I'm a very proud father and even though you are shorter than me, I LOOK UP TO YOU!!!

Dear Ryan,
I remember the day you were born. Dad and I wished each other "Happy Anniversary" and thanked God for the most perfect gift he could have ever given us. Each anniversary since then has been a joyous reminder of the day you came into our lives. We are so proud of the man you have become and love you so much. In the last four years you've had more mountains to climb than most teenagers. Yet your perseverance through all of our pain and struggles has been inspiring and has strengthened you and driven you to be more determined to succeed in your life. Remember the fishermen and have faith son. You have amazed us with your writing talent, academic achievements, your fierce loyalty to family and friends and your strong will which has pushed you to give 100 percent of yourself in everything you do. Now as you move on to a new chapter in your life, know that Dad and I will always stand beside you with our love and support.

Cassy Curry

Cassy,

Being your parents has been one of the greatest gifts in our lives. We don't think it's possible that we could love you any more than what we do. You are an amazing, unique, and gorgeous young lady. Your beauty is from the inside shining out.

Going from mommy and daddy to mom and dad was a very difficult time for us. We realized then how much you were growing up. Take time to enjoy your youth, it goes by so quickly. Before you know it you'll be graduating college and leading your own life. It is our hope you will trust in the honesty and integrity we have showed you.

We are very proud of your academics, work ethics, achievements and most of all your Christian beliefs. We want you to succeed in life, and we can't wait to see the person you will become. Believe in yourself and in your dreams, always have faith in your heart and love will certainly find you. Never settle for less than what you know you are worth. You will be great at whatever you set your mind to.

You are so dear and special to us. Never forget that we love you. We always have and we always will no matter what. Remember Cassy, how truly blessed we are to have had you.

Love, Dad and Mom

May you always have
Many things to laugh at
And real good friends with
Whom you can have a chat
Things you can dream about
Places you want to go
Strength to push yourself
To learn things you never thought you would know

Time for reflection
Of ones you hold dear
The courage in your heart
To do this without fear

We are so proud of you and know that you will be successful no matter what you chose to do!

My Wish (Rascal Flatts)

"I hope the days come easy and the moments pass slow, And each road leads you where you want to go, And if you're faced with the choice and you have to choose, I hope you choose the one that means the most to you, And if one door opens to another door closed, I hope you keep on walkin' til you find the window, If it's cold outside, show the world the warmth of your smile, But more than anything, more than anything, My wish for you, Is that this life becomes all that you want it to, Your dreams stay big, your worries stay small, You never need to carry more than you can hold, I hope you never look back but you never forget, All the ones who love you and the place you left, I hope you always forgive and you never regret, And you help somebody every chance you get! Oh, you'd find God's grace in every mistake, And always give more than you take, while you're out there gettin' where you're gettin' to I hope you know somebody loves you."

We want you to always remember that successes are dreams put into action, and that the good things in life are priceless...love, family, real friends, happiness, civic service, and kindness. We will always remember that you told us that you were born to be in the spotlight. You are right because the spotlight is you! It is your time to beam high to find your pathway in life, and to illumine the world by using your gifts and talents to help others.

You go girl!
Love Mom, Dad, and Steven

All Good Things Must Come To An End.

Spirals are a whirl winding symbol of life. They represent a journey to in which there is a beginning, and throughout that journey experiences along the way turn and mold the spiral to create an ending. The 2011-2012 school year was not just a school year, it was a journey which each individual contributed their own personal spiral to create a picture much larger than themselves. They created a spiral of dedication, passion, and the willingness to succeed, which helped shape and uphold the prestigious name that Battlefield High School so proudly obtains. Throughout the year mistakes were made and people changed. It was not the end result that mattered the most, but instead the lessons learned were actual rewards. In life the greatest success is knowledge itself, and the lessons learned from the cafeteria to the classrooms, prove that "Success Is A Choice" in which each person chose to succeed. As the year turns the corner on the final days of school, the halls are not filled with the indifferences towards classes, but instead are filled with an united body of students. The events that occurred over the period of 180 days proved that the start of a journey does not determine its ending, and that events and experiences can create new opportunities for change, and alter the path to fit the journey destined to the beholder. Goodbyes must be said and people will be missed, but the end of this experience, will only make the beholder grow fonder of the experience itself. Although this spiral in life is at its end, the fact of the matter is, The End Is Only The Beginning.

~Sabrena Fary

Freshman Margaret Gough and sophomore Kelly Turnbull laugh as they express the joy of class unity. Although the girls were from two separate classes they came together to show school spirit with the upperclassmen.

Junior Alyssa Nessel and senior Gabby Crigliano, dance with joy, with their other school mates. During the Homecoming Pep Rally the juniors and seniors set aside their class rivalry, to come together with the underclassmen to show school unity

The Lynx Book, with staff of 60, 7 editors and one business manager, was created using Herff Jones' eDesign on-line program. The editors and yearbook adviser, Mrs. Peyton, went to a Herff Jones' training program at Osbourn Park in the fall. During pre-sales, books sold for $70, and $80 on delivery. Battlefield sold a total of 1050 copies of the 2011-2012 Lynx Book. The copies were printed by Herff Jones at the Gettysburg facility. Inside the 9 x 12 cover, designed by cover artist, Ryan Stouch, made with Pearl Linen materials on a 145pt binders board, the 2011-2012 Lynx book contained 300 all-color pages and was smyth sewn by signatures. The book also contained a custom 4-color endsheets printed on VirbraColor white material. The theme throughout the book was "The End is Only the Beginning." The spiral, throughout the book, represented the theme.

The Lynx Book not only received help from Battlefield teachers, coaches, staff, parents and students, but also Herrf Jones' staff. Extra help was received from customer service adviser, Debbie Drobenak, and local representative, Lisa Heiser. Mrs. Peyton would like to especially thank Angela Cho for going to and covering Governor's school. In addition, Victor O' Neill Studios and Jorge Jatib, from rom8photography, provided us with fantastic photos. Thank you to everyone who contributed their time and talents, for the success of the 2011-2012 Battlefield Lynx Book.
